Races at Pocono attract 100,000

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — An estimated crowd of 70,000 stuffed the grandstands and infield area Saturday to view the second annual Schaefer 500 at Pocono and there was still plenty of room to park for thousands more.

It was estimated that 30,000 fans stayed in the area for the Pennsylvania 500 Sunday and the strain on traffic control and facilities at the raceway was relaxed considerably.

(Related story, page 13)

When the green flag dropped shortly after 1 p.m. Saturday, hundreds of racing fans were still streaming into the parking lot areas. Parking lot attendants successfully shuffled the autos into relatively straight lines throughout the day.

Fending off arguments like, "I'm supposed to park in the garage area," or "I'm a V.I.P.," some 150 men kept the raceway traffic moving except for a brief period Saturday morning when the area at the tunnel entrance to the infield became clogged. "The people are moving well," said one attendant.

"We've had a couple of complaints from big-wigs and other people who said they were supposed to be able to park in or near the garage area, but it was starting to get rough finding spaces for them there so we closed it off."

"There was some confusion at the tunnel earlier and they were funneling traffic in through both lanes. One is supposed to be kept open at all times for emergency vehicles and people kept trying to drive through it until we finally blocked it off with guards."

The only real traffic snarl that developed Saturday was on Long Pond Road. A truck or camper stalled on the road and traffic backed up for about three miles from the tunnel entrance. The jam lasted for a couple of hours past noon.

A Pennsylvania State Police helicopter spotted the situation from the air and alerted police manning the Long Pond Road and Route 940 intersection in Pocono Summit. The troopers prohibited any more cars from entering the road at that point and the jam finally cleared itself up.

Most race fans from the metropolitan areas drove to the race track via Interstate Rt. 80, Rt. 115 and the Long Pond Road entrances. Local bulls took a few short cuts via the Sullivan Trail and Stoney Hollow Road, avoiding delays.

Approximately 30 state policemen were assigned traffic control duties around the area. Many were on duty during the Concert 10 rock festival tie-up July 8 and all agreed there was "no comparison."

One trooper, who directed traffic, or attempted to, during the rock festival for 18 hours said, "This is nothing." He was looking at a small line of cars exiting Long Pond Road to find a quicker way to the track.

"It's been like this most of the day. The most cars we've had backed up to turn in or out at any one time has been about 12."

With less than half of Saturday's race crowd remaining behind for the Sunday running of the Pennsylvania 500, the traffic situation was eased proportionately.

Shortly before 1 p.m. Sunday, the order was given to release half of the troopers with the traffic control contingent from duty.

Monroe County Sheriff

Forest Sebring had 10 special deputies on duty inside the track. All were assigned to security functions in the pit area, keeping eager photographers and fans from the racing area.

Sebring reported only minor incidents occurred over the weekend, most of which were fights and arguments. He said his department was in charge of security between the fence at the pit bleachers up to the pit wall.

A detachment of 15 men from the U.S. Army's 759th Military Police Battalion, Fort Dix, N.J., was also on hand for security and traffic control aid.

Captain Gerard Morigio, commanding officer of the group, said their presence at the raceway was for "public relations" purposes, promoting the new "volunteer Army" concept.

Area service stations reported business was "good, but not any better than usual for this time of year."

"I'll tell you one thing," remarked a Tannersville operator. "I wish I had a quarter for everyone who stopped to ask for directions to the raceway. I'd be a rich man."

On with the race

Thousands of racing fans squeezed into the grandstand seats for Saturday's second annual run of the Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway. Officials estimated 70,000 watched the major race, the second of USAC's Triple Crown racing series.

Eagleton withdrawal asked by top Democratic officials

By United Press International
Led by the national committee's two top officers, Democratic party officials Sunday pressed a growing demand for Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton to withdraw as the party's vice presidential candidate.

Appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," National Chairman Mrs. Jean Westwood said it would be the "noble thing" for Eagleton to do. Vice Chairman Basil Patterson said other party leaders were also urging the Missouri senator to withdraw because of public reaction to his past psychiatric treatment.

Roy Evans, president of the Texas AFL-CIO, which had backed the McGovern-Eagleton ticket despite the national AFL-CIO's official neutrality, also urged Eagleton's withdrawal. He said Eagleton had become a liability to Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern.

"McGovern is going to have a tough time anyway," Evans told a panel of statehouse reporters on a television program in Texas Sunday. "He needs help. He doesn't need any burden."

New York Democratic leader Matthew Troy said the Eagleton controversy has begun to take its toll on the campaign.

Troy, an advisor on urban affairs to McGovern, said "money has stopped coming in" and "people I've talked to... say they don't want to work for McGovern and they may not even vote for him if Eagleton remains on the ticket."

Richard Wade, McGovern's New York State co-campaign chairman, said he doubted "Eagleton can ride this out."

"The nature of the illness as exposed in the press" is not at the center of the controversy, Wade said, but rather "his not having told McGovern" before the nomination.

Both Time and Newsweek magazines released surveys over the weekend showing a majority of ordinary voters polled felt Eagleton should stay on the ticket.

Newsweek's nationwide survey of 513 persons, by the Gallup Organization, showed 80 per cent of those questioned said they felt Eagleton should have told McGovern about his past medical problems before accepting the nomination. But 59 per cent said Eagleton was still fit to serve as vice president and 55 per cent said they felt he should not resign.

Time's survey was of 1,015 persons, taken by telephone by Crossley Surveys, Inc. Of those polled, 76.7 per cent said the Eagleton's past medical history would have no effect on their vote and 13 per cent were undecided. But 5.2 per cent said they planned to change their votes because of Eagleton's announcement.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George S. McGovern said Sunday he is concerned about how much the vice presidential candidacy of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton would strain a nation that already is "nervous and uptight."

Reinforcing the belief that Eagleton may leave the Democratic ticket sometime after a meeting of the two nominees tonight, McGovern said "I wish we had known" about Eagleton's psychiatric history.

McGovern made his remarks during an impromptu news conference early Sunday afternoon in his native South Dakota.

McGovern emphasized that no decision had been reached about Eagleton's place on the ticket.

The Boston Globe said in a copyrighted story that McGovern would ask Eagleton Sunday to resign as the party's vice presidential candidate. Quoting "sources close to the Democratic presidential candidate," the Globe said, "top aides of McGovern have persuaded the South Dakota senator to get rid of Eagleton."

But McGovern told reporters he would not ask Eagleton to resign and said the decision would be a "mutual one" and based on several factors:

"Does it (Eagleton's previous psychiatric treatment) in any way impair his capacity of leadership? Does it arouse anxiety in a public that already is nervous and uptight about its national leadership? Does it damage our chances of winning the election? These are all things I frankly cannot answer."

Eagleton, in a television appearance on CBS' "Face the Nation," said he would not automatically drop off the ticket even if asked to do so by McGovern.

"I would have to weigh it," the Missouri senator said when asked what he would do if such a request was forthcoming. "I don't want to say now until I see... I'll weigh his words."

Extensive reforms urged in jobless compensation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A study commission set up by Congress recommended extensive reforms Sunday in the nation's workmen's compensation systems, including benefits for all workers, increased weekly payments and coverage for all work-related diseases.

The National Commission on State Workmen's Compensation Laws said too many workers are denied adequate payments because of arbitrary and inequitable limits on benefits, the number of weeks benefits are available, the types of workers covered, or the specific diseases that qualify.

"The basic principles of workmen's compensation are sound, but the present performance of the program is unsatisfactory and extensive reforms are essential," the 15-member commission said in a report to Congress and President Nixon.

"The state laws fail the adequacy and equity tests," the panel said following a year-long study of the state-controlled, employer-financed workmen's compensation system.

B. Johnson's Council of Economic Advisers.

The commission recommended that the states be given until mid-1975 to make their own reforms before Congress steps in to require compliance with the commission's proposals.

The report said the separate state laws differ widely in coverage, benefits and protections for workers, and said the cost of implementing its recommendations would vary from state to state.

It said the increased cost of implementing its basic "essential" recommendations would be less than 50 per cent in all but six states, but the added cost would be 50 per cent or more in 21 states if all its proposals were adopted.

Dock strike talks set

LONDON — British port and union officials set a meeting today to try to settle the dock strike that has left 600 ships idle in ports and river mouths. Lord Aldington of the Port of London Authority and Jack Jones of the Transport and General Workers Union will discuss the dispute, which centers on containerization at the ports. Rank-and-file dock workers last Thursday rejected proposals by the two men to settle the strike.

Wallace may campaign

MONTGOMERY — Wallace may campaign for some Democrats without endorsing the party's presidential ticket, an aide said. In ruling out a third-party bid Saturday, the recuperating Alabama governor had said he wouldn't "involve myself in any extensive campaign activity." He didn't mention McGovern. In Maryland today, Arthur Bremer goes on trial on charges of shooting Wallace.

Miss Universe begins reign

DORADO — Kerry Anne Wells, a tall, auburn-haired Australian who wished she had enough power "to dictate peace among men," was ready to begin her world tour Sunday as Miss Universe 1972. Miss Wells, a 20-year-old model and a "weather bird" on a television station in her hometown of Perth, won the title Saturday. She is the first Australian to win the crown. First-runner-up was Miss Brazil, 18-year-old Rejane Vieira Costa de Pelotas. Second, third and fourth runners-up were Miss Venezuela, Maria Antonieta Campoli, Miss Israel, Ilana Goren, and Miss England, Jenny McAdam.

Chess match postponed

REYKJAVIK — World chess champion Boris Spassky, trailing 5-3 in his bid to keep the title from U.S. grand master Bobby Fischer, postponed the ninth game of the $250,000 match Sunday because of a slight head cold, but chess experts said today he was undergoing a mental crisis. "Spassky is in a serious stress crisis," said Yugoslav grand master Svetozar Gligoric. "His crown is slipping and he is worried over the level of his game." Many other experts agreed. Truck falls hanging tree TOMBSTONE, Ariz. (UPI) — The historic Tombstone hanging tree, where bad men met their end in the "town too tough to die," wasn't tough enough to withstand a garbage truck.

City officials said an unidentified sanitation worker who backed his truck into the tree Saturday was fired during his first day on the job.

Local merchants swarmed around the fallen tree, cutting it into pieces to be sold to tourists.

Mrs. Virginia Piper describes captivity.

Kidnap ransom ends nightmare

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Mrs. Virginia Piper, whose husband paid $1 million ransom, highest in U.S. history, to rescue her from kidnappers, Sunday described her two days of captivity in the wilderness as a "very bad nightmare."

"I felt I must not panic or give up," she said. "I felt I was going to get out of there."

Mrs. Piper, 49, wife of H. C. Piper Jr., the board chairman of a Minneapolis investment firm, met with newsmen just a day after she was found, tired and weeping but unharmed, chained to a tree in a heavily wooded area 150 miles north of here.

More than 110 FBI agents and police searched Sunday for the abductors. Special FBI agent Richard G. Held, asked if he had any indication as to the identity of the kidnappers, said, "It is not positive but we're not without hope."

Mrs. Piper said the kidnaping began Thursday when two men wearing stockings over their heads and carrying guns abducted her while she was "picking some dead pansies" at the Pipers' suburban estate.

She said the two abductors (she also believed a third man was involved) drove with her in the woods, her eyes taped shut. She said she was chained to a tree off and on until late Friday night when her husband delivered the $1 million ransom in $20 bills as directed by the kidnappers. Then she was left chained to a tree, she said, and the tape was removed from her eyes.

"I thought the only way I could get out was to uproot the tree. It was a maple and not a big tree, I dug with my hands and got to the roots and I figured that by the end of a week I might be able to dig the tree," Mrs. Piper said. Her finger nails were broken from digging with her hands.

The ordeal ended Saturday when FBI agents, acting on an anonymous tip telephoned to a clergyman, searched an area near Jay Cook State Park, west of Duluth, and found her 12 hours after the ransom was delivered.

Mrs. Piper was found wet from two days of rain, tired and crying, although the kidnappers had left clothing, food and some soft drinks, plus a plastic cover.

Legislator just gives away crop of 30,000 cherries

CHARLEVOIX, Mich. (UPI) —They came with bushel baskets, cardboard boxes, pails and bathtubs, and went away with Richard Friske's cherry crop.

Before the day was over, Friske, a farmer and Michigan state representative, had given away nearly half of his harvest—an estimated 30,000 pounds. He hopes to give away the remaining 40,000 pounds by the end of this week.

It's all a protest on Friske's part. But none of the recipients in Saturday's giveaway complained.

Friske said he'd rather give away all his cherries — at a loss of $3,000 in profits — than "knuckle under" to new federal regulations governing the cherry industry.

"To me, freedom is worth more than money," said the German-born Republican lawmaker who immigrated to the United States after World War II.

"I lived under slavery all my life before I came to this country," he said.

Friske is protesting a recently enacted

federal law which he says "has forced cherry producers to either sell at a dictated price to the processors and store 15 per cent of the product at exorbitant prices or shake them to the ground and pay a fixed penalty to the Cherry Administration Board."

Friske said he hopes to attract the attention of other cherry growers to join with him in a petition campaign designed to convince the government to "reverse or rescind" the new regulations.

Under the regulations, Friske said, he must pick three pounds of cherries before realizing any return. It is the processors, he said, who are reaping the profits.

Friske owns 25 acres of cherry orchards between Altwold and Ellsworth. He kept his gates shut Sunday, but pickings will be easy for cherry lovers the rest of the week.

"The cherries are more beautiful this year than I think they have ever been before," Friske said. "It was a beautiful crop. It hurts a man like me who loves harvesting fruit to do something like this."

Chess match postponed

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) —World chess champion Boris Spassky, trailing 5-3 in his bid to keep his title from Bobby Fischer, postponed the ninth game of the $250,000 championship match Sunday because of a head cold. An observer said he was in a "serious stress crisis."

According to match rules, each player can have three postponements provided a medical certificate is issued and the judge is informed five hours before the game. Sunday's game was scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

"It's just as well for Spassky this is not a boxing match for the world title," said Fred Cramer, a vice president of the U.S. Chess Federation and aide to Fischer. "You can't postpone the ninth round if you are in desperate trouble. Then you quit. Then you're out."

The next game is scheduled for Tuesday at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

Cramer said Fischer's only reaction when he woke up about 2 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) was to ask why he had not been told earlier.

"He (Fischer) knows only too well nobody dares wake him too early," Cramer said.

Fischer won the eighth game on the 37th move Thursday following a beginner's mistake by the Russian world champion. The American challenger needs 12.5 points to win the title and Spassky needs only 12 points to keep it.

N. Vietnam troops attempt to cut vital supply line

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese paratroopers, many of them veterans of the bloody, unsuccessful fight to recapture the Quang Tri citadel, moved through the table-like coastal plains west of Highway 1 Sunday to try to stop North Vietnamese troops from cutting the vital supply line through Quang Tri province.

UPI reporter Ted Kurrus said many of the Communists had been cleared out and the traffic flow along the highway was normal for the first time in more than a week.

Some of the Communists evaded the paratroopers, however, and twice attacked South Vietnamese soldiers guarding the road. A government spokesman said 44 North Vietnamese troops were killed in two sharp battles 15 miles north of Hue, about halfway between the former imperial capital and Quang Tri city.

An estimated 20,000 South Vietnamese troops pushed north from Hue on June 28 to try to recapture Quang Tri province, which was taken by the Communists on May 1, one month after the start of the current offensive.

Government troops have met stiff resistance from the Communists, both in Quang Tri city and along Highway 1—the vital supply link between Hue and the provincial capital.

Many of the paratroopers in the clearing action fought a bloody battle to recapture the Quang Tri citadel—a fortress-like 19th century structure which dominates the battered city. The paratroopers occupied part of the citadel for three days but were ordered out last week and sent south to help sweep the highway.

The paratroopers were relieved by marines, which have not been able to recapture the ground given up by the paratroopers.

The Communists also kept up the pressure around Hue, 32 miles south of Quang Tri, in an apparent move to divert South Vietnamese efforts to recapture the province.

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said heavy fighting was reported around fire bases Bastogne and Checkmate about 12 miles southwest of Hue. Bastogne was captured by the Communists Thursday. Both bases are considered vital in a defense of Hue.

South of Hue, about 280 miles north of Saigon, UPI reporter Edward Basset said the Communists have given up, at least temporarily, an attempt to recapture the district (county) capital of Bong Son.

The town straddles Highway 1, which runs from Saigon to the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). Basset said a 30-truck convoy went through the area to supply government troops farther to the north.

Sadat prepared to discuss Mideast crisis with Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is prepared to meet Israeli leaders face to face to discuss a Middle East settlement, but only if representatives of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France sit in on the sessions, the Israeli newspaper Ha'aretz said Sunday.

In a headline story datelined Paris, the newspaper said Sadat would take part in direct negotiations "only if the Big Four have the power to take decisions" on peace terms.

Ha'aretz quoted French assemblyman Claude Jerard Marcus as the source of its report.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Israel had received nothing of Sadat's comments from official quarters.

"This report is the first we have heard of it," the spokesman said. "Our attitude toward third parties at negotiations, however, is that we don't want anyone to interfere."

Ha'aretz said current peace proposals hinge on opening the Suez Canal.

"The United States still sees a partial settlement to reopen the Suez Canal as the only possible solution to come in the future," Ha'aretz said.

The newspaper said the U.S. plan to reopen the canal was brought up last week in talks between Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin and Assistant Secretary of State Joseph J. Sisco. It said Sisco told Rabin the United States will initiate new diplomatic action "but not in the immediate future—nor before the presidential election."

Ha'aretz said the Israeli cabinet met Sunday and discussed the canal reopening plan and Egypt's expulsion of Soviet military advisers.

The canal reopening plan was brought up in the cabinet meeting by Foreign Minister Abba Eban, political sources said. Eban also reported on talks between U.N. Ambassador Yosef Tekoa and Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

Newspaper reports said Friday Tekoa told Waldheim of Israel's dissatisfaction with the role he was playing in seeking peace in the Middle East.

"The U.N. has lost much of its prestige and influence over the years, and it will not recover if its new secretary general tries too hard to please one of its power blocs," the Jerusalem Post said.

The Post editorial followed newspaper reports that Waldheim expressed support for the Arab interpretation of a U.N. Security Council resolution on the Middle East. The Arabs said the resolution called for withdrawal of Israeli troops from areas they captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

George McGovern, who will be among them. So will Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, McGovern's embattled running mate, meeting with McGovern for the first time since his disclosures of his past medical history last week.

Vice-president Spiro Agnew, 40 United States senators and dozens of Congressmen also were expected to attend services for the 81-year-old president pro tempore of the Senate, who died of a heart attack Thursday in Washington.

The service is scheduled at 12 noon EDT in St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church, a 125-year-old brown brick structure which will have about half of its 1,000 capacity wooden pews reserved for the presidential party, family, dignitaries and the news media.

Ellender, a caustic but eloquent Democrat who would not hesitate to chastise Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy or Nixon on such topics as overspending, civil rights or farm policy, was the last active member of the late Sen. Huey P. Long's old political machine.

Ellender was the acknowledged architect of this country's farm policy, sponsored the nation's first aid to education bill, authored the free lunch program and backed the first minimum wage bill.

Cramer said Fischer's only reaction when he woke up about 2 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) was to ask why he had not been told earlier.

"He (Fischer) knows only too well nobody dares wake him too early," Cramer said.

Fischer won the eighth game on the 37th move Thursday following a beginner's mistake by the Russian world champion. The American challenger needs 12.5 points to win the title and Spassky needs only 12 points to keep it.

Soldiers break-up battle

BELFAST (UPI)—Protestant and Catholic gangs battled with bombs and guns Sunday before being separated by soldiers after nine persons were injured. British troops massed for an invasion of Northern Ireland's barricaded Catholic neighborhoods.

An army spokesman said troops with rubber bullets and nausea gas broke up the melee at Lurgan southwest of Belfast.

It came six months to the day after the Jan. 30 "Bloody Sunday" clash with British troops that resulted in 13 Catholic deaths. Among the injured were two men wounded by gunfire and a policeman hit by a stone.

Gummen in Belfast killed two men, raising to 481 killed the death toll in three years of religious violence in Northern Ireland.

One of the victims was a 20-year-old Catholic bachelor who answered a knock at his front door early Sunday and was shot to death at point-blank range by two gunmen, police said.

The other was an unidentified man, whose body was found on Old Hollywood road by passers-by.

In Londonderry, at least 1,200 extra troops patrolled the streets and searched all cars entering the city as Catholics gathered for a march commemorating the "Bloody Sunday" killings.

The additional troops and tanks fitted with bulldozer blades began arriving in the city Saturday in what political sources said was a prelude to an imminent push against the neighborhood barricades, put up by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) after the "Bloody Sunday" clash.

Since then, British troops and police have not entered the areas except on brief reconnaissance forays.

More housing requested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott and two other Republican senators have joined in asking the administration to more than double its proposed outlays for low cost housing.

Scott, Pa., and Sens. Robert Griffin, Mich., and Robert Taft Jr., Ohio, wrote President Nixon on supporting an original request by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., that the proposed outlay be increased to $335 million.

The administration budget request for fiscal 1973 included $165 million for subsidies for housing for low income families.

Brooke originally asked for the increase saying many public housing authorities are now unable to comply with his amendments to the public housing acts limiting rent charges to no more than one fourth the family incomes.

Scott, Griffin and Taft said in their letter to the President that local housing authorities in their states were in "a precarious financial position" — lacking sufficient funds to comply with Brooke's amendments.

"I know personally of the great need for urban housing in two of Pennsylvania's biggest cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh," Scott said. "Here, low income and public housing is a necessity and the demand far exceeds what is available."

Brighten up those royal cars

LONDON (UPI)—A member of parliament urged Queen Elizabeth Sunday to order the royal automobiles painted in eye-catching oranges, yellows and greens "to brighten up the scene a bit."

Moreover, said MP Wilfred Proudfoot, such colors would contribute to traffic safety.

"It is a scientific fact that cars painted in the bright safety colors are visible farther away than black cars," he said in a statement addressed to the queen. Official cars in Britain, as in most countries, are black.

"We painted our bombers black during the war so they stood less chance of being spotted at night," he said. "It is simply ludicrous that the queen, her ministers and ordinary folk riding about in taxis should be in black vehicles."

Proudfoot, a Conservative party MP, said he also planned to seek House of Commons approval for regulations compelling taxis as well as royal and ministerial vehicles to be painted in bright colors.

"To set an example the government should have all their cars, and royal cars as well, repainted in reflective greens, oranges or yellows," he said. "Apart from the fact that black is a dangerous color on the roads, this would brighten up the scene a bit."

The overwhelming majority of London taxis are still painted traditional black. But a growing number of intrepid cabbies have tried orange, scarlet, and even fluorescent purple—to predictably mixed reaction in this city of enshrined tradition.

One cabbie, waiting for a light to change at an intersection in West London's fashionable Kensington district, told of the howler-hatted chap "who just turned and walked off" when a vermilion taxicab slowed down to pick him up.

"But the young folks seem to like it a lot," the cabbie said.

Proudfoot agreed. He said he himself was practicing what he preached by refusing to drive or ride in black cars.

George McGovern, who will be among them. So will Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, McGovern's embattled running mate, meeting with McGovern for the first time since his disclosures of his past medical history last week.

Mayor fails to stop festival

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The disputed One World Music Festival will be held next Saturday and Sunday at Pitt Stadium.

Mayor Peter F. Flaherty sought an injunction blocking the entire festival but the request was refused Saturday by Judge Charles McCarthy of Allegheny County common pleas court.

However, the judge did rule out a free concert on Flagstaff Hill in Schenley Park on Friday.

Flaherty had objected to the festival, claiming that Pittsburgh police would not be able to cope with the heavy traffic in the Oakland area and would not be able to adequately protect residents and businesses. About 60,000 were expected to attend the festival.

Legislator just gives away crop of 30,000 cherries

CHARLEVOIX, Mich. (UPI) —They came with bushel baskets, cardboard boxes, pails and bathtubs, and went away with Richard Friske's cherry crop.

Before the day was over, Friske, a farmer and Michigan state representative, had given away nearly half of his harvest — an estimated 30,000 pounds. He hopes to give away the remaining 40,000 pounds by the end of this week.

It's all a protest on Friske's part. But none of the recipients in Saturday's giveaway complained.

Friske said he'd rather give away all his cherries — at a loss of $3,000 in profits — than "knuckle under" to new federal regulations governing the cherry industry.

"To me, freedom is worth more than money," said the German-born Republican lawmaker who immigrated to the United States after World War II.

"I lived under slavery all my life before I came to this country," he said.

Friske is protesting a recently enacted

federal law which he says "has forced cherry producers to either sell at a dictated price to the processors and store 15 per cent of the product at exorbitant prices or shake them to the ground and pay a fixed penalty to the Cherry Administration Board."

Friske said he hopes to attract the attention of other cherry growers to join with him in a petition campaign designed to convince the government to "reverse or rescind" the new regulations.

Under the regulations, Friske said, he must pick three pounds of cherries before realizing any return. It is the processors, he said, who are reaping the profits.

Friske owns 25 acres of cherry orchards between Attwood and Ellsworth. He kept his gates shut Sunday, but pickings will be easy for cherry lovers the rest of the week.

"The cherries are more beautiful this year than I think they have ever been before," Friske said. "It was a beautiful crop. It hurts a man like me who loves harvesting fruit to do something like this."

Chess match postponed

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) —World chess champion Boris Spassky, trailing 5-3 in his bid to keep his title from Bobby Fischer, postponed the ninth game of the $250,000 championship match Sunday because of a head cold. An observer said he was in a "serious stress crisis."

According to match rules, each player can have three postponements provided a medical certificate is issued and the judge is informed five hours before the game. Sunday's game was scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

"It's just as well for Spassky this is not a boxing match for the world title," said Fred Cramer, a vice president of the U.S. Chess Federation and aide to Fischer. "You can't postpone the ninth round if you are in desperate trouble. Then you quit. Then you're out."

The next game is scheduled for Tuesday at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

Cramer said Fischer's only reaction when he woke up about 2 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) was to ask why he had not been told earlier.

"He (Fischer) knows only too well nobody dares wake him too early," Cramer said.

Fischer won the eighth game on the 37th move Thursday following a beginner's mistake by the Russian world champion. The American challenger needs 12.5 points to win the title and Spassky needs only 12 points to keep it.

N. Vietnam troops attempt to cut vital supply line

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese paratroopers, many of them veterans of the bloody, unsuccessful fight to recapture the Quang Tri citadel, moved through the table-like coastal plains west of Highway 1 Sunday to try to stop North Vietnamese troops from cutting the vital supply line through Quang Tri province.

UPI reporter Ted Kurrus said many of the Communists had been cleared out and the traffic flow along the highway was normal for the first time in more than a week.

Some of the Communists evaded the paratroopers, however, and twice attacked South Vietnamese soldiers guarding the road. A government spokesman said 44 North Vietnamese troops were killed in two sharp battles 15 miles north of Hue, about halfway between the former imperial capital and Quang Tri city.

An estimated 20,000 South Vietnamese troops pushed north from Hue on June 28 to try to recapture Quang Tri province, which was taken by the Communists on May 1, one month after the start of the current offensive.

Government troops have met stiff resistance from the Communists, both in Quang Tri city and along Highway 1—the vital supply link between Hue and the provincial capital.

Sadat prepared to discuss Mideast crisis with Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is prepared to meet Israeli leaders face to face to discuss a Middle East settlement, but only if representatives of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France sit in on the sessions, the Israeli newspaper Ha'aretz said Sunday.

In a headline story datelined Paris, the newspaper said Sadat would take part in direct negotiations "only if the Big Four have the power to take decisions" on peace terms.

Ha'aretz quoted French assemblyman Claude Jerard Marcus as the source of its report.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Israel had received nothing of Sadat's comments from official quarters.

Nixon, McGovern to attend funeral

HOUMA, La. (UPI)—Funeral services for Allen J. Ellender, a protégé of Huey Long who became a giant of the United States Senate, will be held in this small Louisiana bayou town today with a list of mourners reading like a Who's Who of American government.

Both President Nixon and his Democratic opponent, Sen.

George McGovern, will be among them. So will Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, McGovern's embattled running mate, meeting with McGovern for the first time since his disclosures of his past medical history last week.

Pen Argyl teacher returns from African study tour

PEN ARGYL — Miss Marjorie May, teacher at the Pen Argyl Area High School, returned recently from Tanzania and Kenya, where she was part of a study group sponsored by the Board of Missions of the United Methodist Church.

Members of the group included teachers, social workers, and people interested in community development from 12 states in the United States. All members had studied Swahili since January in order to be able to communicate with the people of East Africa, most of whom use Swahili as the lingua franca.

The focus of study was on the new educational programs for development in the two countries. In Tanzania, where President Julius Nyerere has introduced the Ujamaa (or familyhood) concept of cooperative self-help in the rural areas, the group was able to visit a number of village schools, where they observed literacy programs for adults as well as primary schools.

In several villages to which they were driven over paths the adults singing the popular song of the Tanzania African National Union party — "Ee Tanu, Tujenge nchi, Tanu ee." (Translation: O Tanu, Let us build our country, Tanu O)

In Kenya, where 52 languages are spoken, the group was conducted on a tour of the Adult Studies Center at the Kikuyu Campus by Mrs. Francis Mwachia, whose husband, a former student at Moravian College in Bethlehem, is now the chief adviser of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry in the government of Kenya.

In his work with the Kenya government, Mwachia has been sent to the United Nations, Geneva, Switzerland, Japan, and to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia (the headquarters of the Organization of African Unity).

In addition to visits to the University of Nairobi, Kenya Science Teachers College, and the Nairobi Polytechnic Institute, the group learned about the Harambee schools, which are built by the people without government aid. Harambee means, "Let's pull together," and can be compared with the efforts in America years ago when neighbors helped one another in barn raisings.

During an afternoon spent with Maasai at their manyatta (group of huts around a corral where the animals are kept at night), the U.S. educators were able to enter a Maasai home and converse with the Maasai in Swahili.

During the more than 15-hour flight home, the group crossed the equator and later looked down on the icy mountains of Greenland within a few hours.

While in Nairobi, Miss May visited with Ruth Kagiri, who lived with her in Pen Argyl in 1961-62 while she studied at the East Stroudsburg State College. Ruth Kagiri is teaching fourth grade in Nairobi at present.

The trip to East Africa was the third time that Miss May has been involved in studying "Education for Development." Last summer she participated in a similar meeting for 10 days in Cuernavaca, Mexico, and in 1970 she spent a week with the same group at the Church Center for the United Nations.

Varied programs set for recreation area

COLUMBIA, N.J. — A variety of daytime and evening programs will be presented at Hidden Lake in Pennsylvania and at Worthington State Forest and Watergate Recreational Site in New Jersey during the weekend of Aug. 4 and 5.

Outdoor skills in fishing will be demonstrated at Hidden Lake at 10 a.m. Aug. 5. At 8:45 p.m. the campfire circle at Hidden Lake will host the program "Indians in the Delaware Valley." Hidden Lake is located one mile east of U.S. 209 between Marshalls Creek and Bushkill.

The evening programs at Worthington State Forest are "Indians in the Delaware Valley," Friday, Aug. 4, and "Classrooms Without Walls," a look at school use of park lands for environmental studies, on Saturday, Aug. 5.

Both programs at Worthington will be presented at 8:45 p.m. Worthington State Forest is located in New Jersey, four miles north of the Interstate 80 Delaware Water Gap bridge.

An outdoors skills program on nature study will be conducted at 2 p.m. Aug. 5 at the Watergate Recreational Site. At 7 p.m., the fourth in a series of concerts will be presented by the Artists for Environment, a non-profit foundation.

Meeting cancelled

WHITE HAVEN — Dr. Wesley D. White, superintendent of White Haven State School and Hospital, announced Thursday that the regular board of trustees meeting for July has been cancelled.

Fair premiums changed

MILFORD — The premium list for the Delaware Valley Fair and Farm Show has been given a new look this year, particularly in the clothing and fine arts division. Classes have been enlarged and updated to conform with Pennsylvania's premium list guide.

There's a category for everybody, no matter what your interests. If you like raising flowers, baking, sewing, gardening, painting have hobbies to display, or what have you, bring it to the Fair.

The junior exhibitors are an important part of the Delaware Valley Fair and they are encouraged to exhibit.

Besides individual and group displays for 4-H Club members, the schedule has provided a division for young people up to 14 years of age. There are classes in handwork, flower arrangements and baked products. Parents are urged to encourage the young people to participate. The entries in handwork are: woven articles, knitted articles, crocheted articles, toys, dressed dolls, novelties and ponchos.

In flower arrangements division there are: arrangement for teacher's desk, arrangement in a natural container, arrangement in a toy, and dish garden.

Baked products have the following classes: white bread, loaf; candy; cookies; toll house cookies and others.

There's plenty of time to practice before the fair, which will be held August 10 to 12.

Anyone desiring a farm show schedule should contact Fair Secretary, Cynthia Van Lierde in the Courthouse Annex, Milford, Pa., or phone 296-6122.

Emergency services under study

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Dr. Leonard Bachman, health advisor to the governor, announced Friday a $500,000 federal grant designed to improve ambulance and other emergency services in the state.

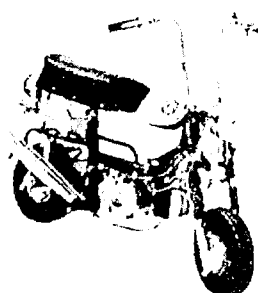

"The carnage on the streets and highways of Pennsylvania has reached the epidemic stage where 6,000 Pennsylvanians die each year as the result of accidents before reaching the hospital," Bachman said.

He said the money will go to local communities to develop 10 emergency medical services councils, charged with evaluating, coordinating and developing community capacities for dealing with medical emergencies.

$1 million industrial plant proposed for Greene Twp.

MILFORD — The Pike County Industrial Development Corp. formed several years ago, through the Pike County Chamber of Commerce was reactivated to consider a presentation by the Swiss Maid, an Embroidery Manufacturing Company.

Now located in Bergen County, N.J., the firm is interested in locating another plant on a 50-acre site in Greene Township near Interstate 84. This operation will be in addition to the existing plant and part of the firm's normal expansion program.

A new air conditioned building with a complete dehumidification system, 18 foot ceilings especially designed for the new embroidery machines is planned. An artists rendering showed a central building, housing the major executive offices, having two 150 x 100 wings. The building will be set 400 to 800 feet off the road in a stand of hemlock and pines. Plans are for the grounds to be attractively landscaped with a pond and fountain, using recycled aerated water from the air conditioning system.

Robert Koch, president of the company, noted that the pond and stream, besides providing a park like setting for the plant would also be a source of water for fire protection.

When completed, it is estimated the plant will cost over a million dollars.

Questioned by the directors why they chose a resort area to build, the Swiss Maid officials disclosed they had in mind providing tours of their operation for the public. Also to offer materials and manufactured articles on a retail level.

"Home sewing has become a three billion a year market," Koch noted. "We are hoping to meet this market with our products and our embroidered materials."

Projecting the number of employees, Koch estimated that there would be 35 to 50 employed the first year; 60 to 70 the second year and 90 to 100 the third year. The male employees would be in the ratio of three to one. Trained male employees would receive between $9,500 and $10,000 a year. Training period is approximately two to three months. No special skills are needed. Only a willingness to learn a trade.

"Net earnings the first year of operation," Koch stated, "should be in the neighborhood of $120,000."

Koch was accompanied by Edward Koch, his brother; a brother-in-law Robert Batch and Gershwin Weiner, one of his designers. The firm is family owned and operated. Each officer is able to do all the operations. They have been in business for 16 years

Milford youth gets jail term

MILFORD — A 17-year-old Milford juvenile was ordered confined for one year in the Leysville State Correctional Institution in Perry County for selling dangerous drugs (LSD).

Sentence was pronounced by Judge Arlington W. Williams following a hearing in Milford. The youth was arrested shortly after making the sale on Feb. 24. He was apprehended by state police from the Milford barracks.

and in all that time there have been no strikes or lay offs. Current payroll is $600,000.

The business plant is 16 times as valuable as when it was started and grosses a million and a half dollars. Stock in emblems and insignia amounts to a quarter of a million.

All designs for emblems, insignias, materials, etc., are copyrighted. The officers of the company maintain Swiss passports giving them access to many innovative six months before they arrive in this country. Making possible the manufacturing of a superior product.

"Land where we are now located is prohibitive" Koch explained. "Labor is high priced and we are in a hard labor market where there is 38 per cent unemployment." "We are familiar with this area, the president of the Swiss Maid, continued. "We have friends in the county and have been visiting here since 1948."

The procedures involved in locating an industrial corporation in the county were explained by John Schneider attorney for Koch. Financing in this instance will be through the First National Bank of Easton (Wilkes-Barre Branch). The Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority must approve a loan on the land and 10 per cent of the local funding must come from the community.

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members go on the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right — 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" — no starvation — because the diet is designed that way. It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is honestly a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really do want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.

Send only $2.00 ($2.25 for Rush Service)—Cash is O.K.—to: Ski Team Diet, P.O. Box 15493, San Diego, California 92115. Don't order unless you expect to lose 20 pounds in two weeks! Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do!

Pen Argyl teacher returns from African study tour

PEN ARGYL — Miss Marjorie May, teacher at the Pen Argyl Area High School, returned recently from Tanzania and Kenya, where she was part of a study group sponsored by the Board of Missions of the United Methodist Church.

Members of the group included teachers, social workers, and people interested in community development from 12 states in the United States. All members had studied Swahili since January in order to be able to communicate with the people of East Africa, most of whom use Swahili as the lingua franca.

The focus of study was on the new educational programs for development in the two countries. In Tanzania, where President Julius Nyerere has introduced the Ujamaa (or familyhood) concept of cooperative self-help in the rural areas, the group was able to visit a number of village schools, where they observed literacy programs for adults as well as primary schools.

In several villages to which they were driven over paths they were welcomed by the adults singing the popular song of the Tanzania African National Union party — "Ee Tanu, Tujenge nchi, Tanu ee." (Translation: O Tanu, Let us build our country, Tanu O)

In Kenya, where 52 languages are spoken, the group was conducted on a tour of the Adult Studies Center at the Kikuyu Campus by Mrs. Francis Mwhia, whose husband, a former student at Moravian College in Bethlehem, is now the chief adviser of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry in the government of Kenya.

In his work with the Kenya government, Mwhia has been sent to the United Nations, Geneva, Switzerland, Japan, and to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia (the headquarters of the Organization of African Unity).

In addition to visits to the University of Nairobi, Kenya Science Teachers College, and the Nairobi Polytechnic Institute, the group learned about the Harambee schools, which are built by the people without government aid. Harambee means, "Let's pull together," and can be compared with the efforts in America years ago when neighbors helped one another in barn raisings.

During an afternoon spent with Maasai at their manyatta (group of huts around a corral where the animals are kept at night), the U.S. educators were able to enter a Maasai home and converse with the Maasai in Swahili.

During the more than 15-hour flight home, the group crossed the equator and later looked down on the icy mountains of Greenland within a few hours.

While in Nairobi, Miss May visited with Ruth Kagiri, who lived with her in Pen Argyl in 1961-62 while she studied at the East Stroudsburg State College. Ruth Kagiri is teaching fourth grade in Nairobi at present.

Nixon lights fuse on McGovern's defense 'dynamite'

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Ottawa News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. George McGovern's plan to cut $30 billion in defense expenditures is loaded with political dynamite. It has a long fuse and the Nixon Administration intends to keep it burning right into November.

While the Pentagon refuses to talk now in terms of specific bases and installations that would be targeted in any drastic defense cutback, every congressman with a major defense facility in his district is on notice that he may lose it.

Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, instead, talks of "padding" at least three Navy yards, shutting a total of 500 military bases, closing nine strategic bomber bases, eliminating 46 storage depots and wiping out more than one million jobs.

Such a prospect is just one of the reasons organized labor is nervous about McGovern. It is also a reason why the Senator from South Dakota eventually will be forced to deal more precisely with the political and economic implications of his military budget which is coming under increasing attack from Laird and other Nixon officials.

For the moment, the Nixonites are content to say that the burden of proof is on McGovern to show that his proposed defense cuts won't have the effect postulated by the Defense Department's analysis.

McGovern denies Laird's characterization that the budget amounts to a "white flag of surrender." He says he won't permit the United States to become a second-rate power and vows that our essential military commitments can be adequately met by his bare-bones budget, without the "shiny new technological toys," the costly overruns, and the "waste" inherent in the current programs.

All but obscured in the building controversy over defense spending is the Administration's own record of trimming the military establishment. In the past three and one-half years, for instance, military and civilian defense manpower has been cut by 1.4 million, to the lowest point since 1950. Purchases from defense industry have been cut by 40 per cent, eliminating 1.3 million defense-related jobs.

In terms of firepower and weaponry, the Nixon-Laird team has slashed three and one-third Army divisions, cut the number of aircraft carriers by eight, reduced the size of the fleet by 338 ships and trimmed the number of fixed-wing aircraft by 6,250.

In spite of these sharp manpower and purchasing reductions, inflation has eaten up any chance for "real" savings and a budget that would have been $54 billion in constant 1968 dollars becomes $78 billion in today's economy. McGovern is talking about an outlay of $54 billion in the first fiscal year of his administration, compared with $84 billion for the Nixon Administration.

The Pentagon budget analysts have been burning the midnight oil to provide Messrs. Laird and Company with a rundown of the changes that would be required if Congress went along with the McGovern program. The Laird analysis sent to friends on Capitol Hill runs to 64 pages and is calculated to shake the foundations of the military-industrial complex.

According to Secretary Laird, the McGovern plan would lead to all these developments and more: retiring the Titan ICBMs, discontinuing the deployment of Minuteman III ICBM's and keeping a force of predominantly older Minuteman I's and II's; canceling prototype development of the B-1 bomber, reducing the force of manned strategic bombers from more than 500 to 200; eliminating the Safeguard ABM system.

The Pentagon says the National Guard would be reduced to a "domestic militia ill-suited to reinforce the active forces in an emergency."

In terms of economic consequences, the Department foresees heavy joblessness in California, Texas, Ohio, Missouri and Arizona among aerospace contractors. It says the cancellation of the F-15 aircraft contract, for instance, could force Pratt and Whitney in Hartford, Conn. to close down completely. The Nation's shipyards could look forward to little more than a submarine construction program through 1980.

The implications of the McGovern defense budget have only begun to surface. When the Democratic Presidential nominee returns to his Senate duties, he may begin to encounter the flak on the Senate floor where debate is under way on the defense procurement bill — the place where all the new huge weapons systems get authorized.

And if McGovern is serious about reducing military spending, he will have a ready forum to spell it all out or, at least, explain it to his jittery colleagues.

Planning makes events welcome

The image of the Poconos is changing, and so far this year the thanks go to the Pocono International Raceway.

Long known as a quiet, rural area to retreat to from the noisome surroundings of the big city, the Poconos have taken on some of the aura of a big event center, stealing some of the thunder from the traditional big-crowd watering holes.

It all began last year, really, with the first running of the Schaefer 500. But the pace really built up with this year's raceway card. And the weather lent a hand, postponing the second annual Schaefer 500 to a weekend when the Pennsylvania 500 stock car race was also run.

That gave the Poconos the enviable reputation of presenting the biggest one-two punch in auto racing in the nation. A total of 100,000 (estimated) — it probably was higher — flocked to the area to watch those super-events.

And, of course, there was the highly controversial Concert 10 rock festival with its estimated 200,000 rock aficionados. That event not only clogged the Poconos with people, but put the tiny community of Long Pond squarely on the map nationwide. While the name had become familiar to racing buffs after the inaugural 500 race, everyone was interested in what turned out to be the second largest crowd to ever gather in one place in the United States. Only Woodstock was bigger.

Of course, this blessing is mixed. What makes the Poconos attractive to all those vacationers and second home buyers is its normal tranquility. Too much of this sort of big event promotion might tarnish that image to our eventual detriment.

But with adequate planning, there's no need for this to happen. Just a brief comparison between the Concert 10 phenomenon and the big race weekend makes that clear.

Alarmed by the rock festival fiasco, officials of Tunkhannock Township decided on an ordinance giving them tighter control over planning for future events. And, no less alarmed, raceway officials fell to with a vengeance in planning for smooth traffic control for the 70,000 race fans who flocked in on Saturday and the 30,000 who went to the track Sunday.

With adequate personnel and planning, the weekend was "a piece of cake" as one relaxed and smiling state trooper put it.

We hope everyone concerned learned a lesson from the rock festival boondoggle. It seems as though everyone has. There should be little reason to take an adamant position against future king-sized events.

Chou deflates peace hopes

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai has quietly deflated U.S. hopes that the Chinese might intervene with Hanoi to settle the Vietnam war. During six hours of secret talks with House leaders Hale Boggs, D-La., and Gerald Ford, R-Mich., Chou held firmly to the line that Peking will neither abandon its support of North Vietnam nor intervene to end the war.

The Chinese leader called for "political, not military" resolution of the war. But he added that the U.S. proposal for settling the fate of South Vietnam by elections "will not do" because President Thieu "will control them with guns."

Boggs and Ford, just back from a 14-day visit to China, summarized their findings in a confidential, 20-page letter to President Nixon, dated July 20. They spoke with both Premier Chou and Vice Minister Ch'iao Kuan-hua.

"While both stressed that China has sent no troops to Vietnam, wrote the House leaders, 'neither specifically stated that China would not send them if asked.'"

There was one optimistic note. "Remarkably, or so it seemed to us, only once during the entire trip," the Congressmen advised President Nixon, "was the blockade of North Vietnam even mentioned by our Chinese hosts. And then, only in passing by Premier Chou. The bombing of North Vietnam was mentioned much more emphatically."

Military line

There have been hints out of China that Peking would look favorably upon a Korea-type truce in Vietnam. On this subject, Boggs and Ford report: "Both Chou and Ch'iao laid heavy emphasis on the 17th parallel being a military line, not a political demarcation comparable to the 38th parallel in Korea and the dividing line between East and West Germany."

Speaking of Korea, Ch'iao added: "The U.S. and China should help North and South Korea to come together gradually, even though neither system can be imposed upon the other."

After leaving China, Congressman Ford made a public statement that Premier Chou opposed American disarmament and encouraged an American presence in the Pacific to control the Soviet military threat. This apparently embarrassed Chou, who issued a denial.

The statement is repeated however, in the confidential Boggs-Ford report to the President. The Chinese leader warned that Russia will not disarm, therefore it would be a mistake for the United States to disarm, they reported.

Nevertheless, the House leaders quoted Ch'iao as stating explicitly: "We approve of the SALT agreements," though he said the ceilings on strategic weapons should include quality as well as quantity limitations.

There is grave Chinese concern over the Soviet military build-up on the Chinese border. However, they quoted Ch'iao as stressing: "Our policy is still to try to improve relations with the Soviet Union because of the long common border, but quite some time will be required."

Just as the Chinese look upon U.S. power in the Pacific as a deterrent to Russia, they would also like U.S. forces to remain in Europe to keep the Soviets from shifting more strength to the Chinese border. Chou told the congressmen: "Mansfield (the Senate Democratic leader) is unrealistic in calling for withdrawal of U.S. troops from Europe."

Here are other highlights from the Boggs-Ford report to the President:

— "No big power should have predominance in Southeast Asia."

— It will be "very difficult for Chinese to visit America while the two-China problem continues. Washington, D.C., is 'off limits' to official (Red Chinese) visitors so long as Nationalist China has an embassy here . . . Both Chou and Ch'iao are relatively relaxed about Taiwan, expecting it to go their way inevitably in due time."

— Ch'iao is quoted as warning that "retention of U.S. troops in Japan may breed strong Japanese nationalism and resurgent rearmament; as in the case of Germany, it is impossible to disarm an entire nation."

— "Both Chou and Ch'iao insist China has no ambition for expansion; too much to do at home."

— "Neither Chou nor Ch'iao, nor also a top Chinese trade official manifested any real interest in large trade initiatives."

— Ch'iao urged "U.S. support of Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia and the King of Laos." Ch'iao said "Sihanouk's only 'ism' is possibly 'Buddhism.'" — Ch'iao also was quoted as saying "on nuclear weapons, our policy is that all countries should prohibit their manufacture and destroy present stockpiles . . . We will never be the first to use nuclear weaponry; if ever used for defense only."

— The Chinese leaders also emphasized: "We mustn't let past differences control our future relations . . . We must go forward, step-by-step, gradually; China has much preparatory work to do."

Allen Report

O'Brien's mission

WASHINGTON — Deposed Democratic national chairman Lawrence O'Brien has been given his first big chores as "national campaign manager."

It's a tough one — to persuade former President Lyndon Johnson and Mayor Richard Daley to forget and forgive all the harsh barbs and rebuffs and to embrace the McGovern-Eagleton combination.

O'Brien is a wily choice for the thorny job. He is on cordial terms with both Johnson and Daley.

O'Brien was Postmaster General in the Johnson cabinet, and in that role a loyal supporter of his domestic and foreign policies, including the Vietnam conflict. With Daley, O'Brien has had warm personal and political relations since the 1960 Kennedy campaign in which the Chicago Mayor played a key part in putting JFK in the White House.

But whether O'Brien, with his ingratiating persuasiveness and long-standing friendly ties, can bring them around is another question.

The chances are much better with Daley than Johnson.

Although Daley and his elected 59 delegates were high-handedly kicked out of the Miami Beach convention by the ruling McGovernites, he has important local political interests at stake in the November election. For this reason, Daley doubtless will go through the motions of having a fanfare meeting with McGovern and solemnly avowing fealty and allegiance.

To some extent, the Chicago Mayor already has done that. In a postconvention statement, which pointedly did not mention McGovern, Daley stressed he is a lifelong Democrat and has always supported the ticket from top to bottom.

McGovern is after much more than that — in his belated effort to "unify" the Democratic party and wheedle old-line leaders into going to bat for him.

The South Dakotan wants a public peace pow-wow with Daley with all the hoopla trappings of press, TV and radio, and that is what O'Brien is supposed to bring off.

How far he gets remains to be seen. With former President Johnson, O'Brien is up against a very different and distinctly unpromising situation.

Johnson isn't running for anything, and leading Texas Democratic candidates are shying away from McGovern like poison ivy. Dolph Briscoe, party standard-bearer for governor who openly favored Gov. Wallace, is making it clear he won't be around when McGovern stumps the state.

Also, former Gov. John Connally, one of Johnson's closest personal and political friends, is vigorously supporting President Nixon. Connally is heading a nationwide "Democrats for Nixon" operation.

Further, Johnson doesn't lightly take slights and affronts — and there were plenty from McGovern and his stridently ram-bunctious and caustically militant cohorts before and during the national convention. Throughout McGovern's primary electioneering, the former President was a handy whipping-boy. Directly and indirectly, he was berated and excoriated — chiefly over Vietnam.

At the convention, Johnson was deliberately insulted by being glaringly ignored.

In effect, the Texan was a "non-person."

There was a picture of him, but few saw it because it was hung in an obscure passageway. And not a single speaker mentioned him — including McGovern and Eagleton. As far as the cocky McGovernites and the "reform" convention were concerned, Johnson never existed.

Injured eardrum?

In a fit of anger, I slapped my teen-age daughter. Soon after, her ear began to bleed.

My guilt knows no limits. But my greatest worry is that I might have injured her eardrum permanently.

Mr. R.N.B., Tex.

Dear Mr. B.:

Many times a slap over the ear will cause a "blast" effect and injure the eardrum.

The first evidence of it is some blood in the ear canal. Hearing is immediately impaired.

Almost always, the injury to the eardrum is temporary. Within a few weeks the ear usually returns to normal.

I assume that your daughter has been examined by a doctor or an ear specialist. This is imperative.

He is acutely and furiously aware of this intentional snubbing.

The former President followed the convention proceedings with three different TV sets. There was little he missed — and very little that he liked.

Johnson will not bolt. But neither is he likely to do anything for McGovern. He has strong misgivings about the South Dakota leftist personally and ideologically. As one Johnson intimate belligerently exclaimed, "Why should he do anything for that clunker? What did McGovern ever do for Johnson except to deride and denounce him?"

So O'Brien has his work cut out for him in a very big way to bring Johnson around.

That's the inside reason behind McGovern's publicly declared intention (at a press conference) to seek Johnson's support. This was a carefully timed gesture for an invitation to visit Johnson. It hasn't been forthcoming yet.

Whether O'Brien can wangle one remains to be seen. Don't bet on it!

You've got to hand it to Rep. Pete McCloskey!

When it comes to brazen gall, the left-wheeling California Republican is in a class by himself.

Despite all he has said and done about President Nixon, including spearheading a Democratic-engineered "dump Nixon" agitation, McCloskey had no qualms about hustling to the White House to take his turn getting an electrifying photograph with the President.

Of all McCloskey's weirdo antics, this was tops — or perhaps the bottom.

Following is what happened: Rep. Bob Wilson (Cal.) chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, arranged with the President for a series of picture-taking sessions with GOP Congressmen. A bus was provided to transport them to and from the White House.

To Wilson's astonishment, among the first to ask to be listed was none other than McCloskey.

Shortly before that, he had sided with the clique of militant liberal Democrats and voted against the Administration on several legislative issues. This was par for McCloskey. He and Rep. Donald Riegle, Michigan GOP leftist, almost always line up with the Democratic dissidents.

Republican leaders suspected that McCloskey's real purpose in responding to the invitation to be photographed with the President was the hope he would be turned down — and thus give him the chance to create a headlined furor.

If that was his intent, he was disappointed.

He was given impeccable treatment all the way down the line — foremost including the President. With a broad smile, he genially greeted the would-be "dumper." "Hello, Pete. Glad to see you."

"Hi, Mr. President," replied McCloskey, somewhat sheepishly.

As the photographer posed them together, the President asked, "How are you doing? Are you going to have a tough race?"

"I'm running scared," said McCloskey. "I always do. No use taking any chances. Under the redistricting, my district has been reshuffled a bit. But it's not too bad. I expect to be back next Congress."

"Good," said the President. "I'll look forward to seeing you."

Other Republican legislators, awaiting their turn to be photographed with the President, listened to this conversation with ill-concealed amusement. Said one sotto voce, "I'll bet he's looking forward to seeing that bird next year."

Nixon lights fuse on McGovern's defense 'dynamite'

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Ottawa News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. George McGovern's plan to cut $30 billion in defense expenditures is loaded with political dynamite. It has a long fuse and the Nixon Administration intends to keep it burning right into November.

While the Pentagon refuses to talk now in terms of specific bases and installations that would be targeted in any drastic defense cutback, every congressman with a major defense facility in his district is on notice that he may lose it.

Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, instead, talks of "padding" at least three Navy yards, shutting a total of 500 military bases, closing nine strategic bomber bases, eliminating 46 storage depots and wiping out more than one million jobs.

Such a prospect is just one of the reasons organized labor is nervous about McGovern. It is also a reason why the Senator from South Dakota eventually will be forced to deal more precisely with the political and economic implications of his military budget which is coming under increasing attack from Laird and other Nixon officials.

Planning makes events welcome

The image of the Poconos is changing, and so far this year the thanks go to the Pocono International Raceway.

Long known as a quiet, rural area to retreat to from the noisome surroundings of the big city, the Poconos have taken on some of the aura of a big event center, stealing some of the thunder from the traditional big-crowd watering holes.

It all began last year, really, with the first running of the Schaefer 500. But the pace really built up with this year's raceway card. And the weather lent a hand, postponing the second annual Schaefer 500 to a weekend when the Pennsylvania 500 stock car race was also run.

That gave the Poconos the enviable reputation of presenting the biggest one-two punch in auto racing in the nation. A total of 100,000 (estimated — it probably was higher) flocked to the area to watch those super-events.

And, of course, there was the highly controversial Concert 10 rock festival with its estimated 200,000 rock aficionados. That event not only clogged the Poconos with people, but put the tiny community of Long Pond squarely on the map nationwide. While the name had become familiar to racing buffs after the inaugural 500 race, everyone was interested in what turned out to be the second largest crowd to ever gather in one place in the United States. Only Woodstock was bigger.

Of course, this blessing is mixed. What makes the Poconos attractive to all those vacationers and second home buyers is its normal tranquility. Too much of this sort of big event promotion might tarnish that image to our eventual detriment.

But with adequate planning, there's no need for this to happen. Just a brief comparison between the Concert 10 phenomenon and the big race weekend makes that clear.

Alarmed by the rock festival fiasco, officials of Tunkhannock Township decided on an ordinance giving them tighter control over planning for future events. And, no less alarmed, raceway officials fell to with a vengeance in planning for smooth traffic control for the 70,000 race fans who flocked in on Saturday and the 30,000 who went to the track Sunday.

With adequate personnel and planning, the weekend was "a piece of cake" as one relaxed and smiling state trooper put it.

We hope everyone concerned learned a lesson from the rock festival boondoggle. It seems as though everyone has. There should be little reason to take an adamant position against future king-sized events.

The Poconos, we are confident, will not lose their charm and appeal through any more poorly planned events that leave a bad taste in the mouths of local residents, and an apprehension in the minds of those who like to come here on their vacations, or who are planning a second home in the area.

Those top events are nice to have, but we must remember what is most important to this area — people.

For the moment, the Nixonites are content to say that the burden of proof is on McGovern to show that his proposed defense cuts won't have the effect postulated by the Defense Department's analysis.

McGovern denies Laird's characterization that the budget amounts to a "white flag of surrender." He says he won't permit the United States to become a second-rate power and vows that our essential military commitments can be adequately met by his bare-bones budget, without the "shiny new technological toys", the costly overruns, and the "waste" inherent in the current programs.

All but obscured in the building controversy over defense spending is the Administration's own record of trimming the military establishment. In the past three and one-half years, for instance, military and civilian defense manpower has been cut by 1.4 million, to the lowest point since 1950. Purchases from defense industry have been cut by 40 per cent, eliminating 1.3 million defense-related jobs.

In terms of firepower and weaponry, the Nixon-Laird team has slashed three and one-third Army divisions, cut the number of aircraft carriers by eight, reduced the size of the fleet by 338 ships and trimmed the number of fixed-wing aircraft by 6,250.

In spite of these sharp manpower and purchasing reductions, inflation has eaten up any chance for "real" savings and a budget that would have been $54 billion in constant 1968 dollars becomes $78 billion in today's economy. McGovern is talking about an outlay of $54 billion in the first fiscal year of his administration, compared with $84 billion for the Nixon Administration.

The Pentagon budget analysts have been burning the midnight oil to provide Messrs. Laird and Company with a rundown of the changes that would be required if Congress went along with the McGovern program. The Laird analysis sent to friends on Capitol Hill runs to 64 pages and is calculated to shake the foundations of the military-industrial complex.

According to Secretary Laird, the McGovern plan would lead to all these developments and more: retiring the Titan ICBMs, discontinuing the deployment of Minuteman III ICBMs and keeping a force of predominantly older Minuteman I's and II's; canceling prototype development of the B-1 bomber, reducing the force of manned strategic bombers from more than 500 to 200; eliminating the Safeguard ABM system.

The Pentagon says the National Guard would be reduced to a "domestic militia ill-suited to reinforce the active forces in an emergency."

In terms of economic consequences, the Department foresees heavy joblessness in California, Texas, Ohio, Missouri and Arizona among aerospace contractors. It says the cancellation of the F-15 aircraft contract, for instance, could force Pratt and Whitney in Hartford, Conn. to close down completely. The Nation's shipyards could look forward to little more than a submarine construction program through 1980.

The implications of the McGovern defense budget have only begun to surface. When the Democratic Presidential nominee returns to his Senate duties, he may begin to encounter the flak on the Senate floor where debate is under way on the defense procurement bill — the place where all the new huge weapons systems get authorized.

And if McGovern is serious about reducing military spending, he will have a ready forum to spell it all out or, at least, explain it to his jittery colleagues.

Chou deflates peace hopes

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai has quietly deflated U.S. hopes that the Chinese might intervene with Hanoi to settle the Vietnam war. Ligonier, Pa. (UPI) —

Kermit Zarley and Babe Hickey, former teammates at the University of Houston, shot a five-under-par 66 Sunday to coast to a three-stroke victory in the PGA national Team Championship.

Zarley clinched the top prize of $20,000 per man when he made an eight-foot birdie putt at the 17th hole, but it was Hickey who carried the team through most of the tournament, scoring 16 birdies as they finished at 22-under-par 262.

Johnny Miller and Grier Jones slipped into second place at 265 with a 63 Sunday, the best round of the day.

Lanny Wadkins and Gibby Gilbert shot a 69 for a 266 and finished third while Tommy Aaron and Charles Coody, the first-round leaders, were fourth with 64 for 267.

Hickey and Zarley, who have not won an individual tournament since 1970, had five birdies and no bogeys in their final round. Zarley birdied the short par five sixth hole and two par threes on the back nine including No. 17. Hickey birdied the two longest par five holes on the 7,045-yard Laurel Valley Golf Club course, which was softened by a morning-long rain.

Birds zip Yanks, 5-0

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Boog Powell's 12th home run provided Mike Cuellar with an early cushion as the Baltimore southpaw shut out the New York Yankees for the second time this season in a 5-0 Sunday victory.

Cuellar, 10-8, walked five batters but stranded them plus three more baserunners in raising his lifetime record against the Yankees to 11-3. He shut out New York on June 28th 4-0.

Cubs beat Cardinals

CHICAGO (UPI) — Glenn Beckert, 0-for-12 in the series, doubled home a pair of runs with the bases-loaded and two out in the bottom of the eighth inning Sunday to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-4 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals and a sweep for the day after the Cubs won the opener 4-0 behind Rick Reuschel.

In the nightcap, the Cardinals staked starter Dennis Higgins to a 4-0 lead in the first inning. Ted Simmons' double with the bases-loaded was the big blow.

Mets beat Montreal, 3-1, remain 6 1/2 behind Bucs

NEW YORK (UPI)—Duffy Dyer's seventh-inning single drove in Cleon Jones with the winning run as the New York Mets downed the Montreal Expos, 3-1, Sunday to break a three-game losing streak.

Jones opened the seventh with a triple off losing pitcher Carl Morton and scored when Dyer lined a single to right field. The Mets added an insurance run in the eighth inning on Tommie Agee's sixth homer of the season.

Montreal scored in the fourth inning when pinch-runner Clyde Mashore stole home with two out. Mashore entered the game as a replacement for Jim Fairley, who singled with one out and advanced to third on Ron Fairly's second double of the game. Fairley pulled a hamstring muscle on Fairly's double.

After Mets' starter Jim McAndrew struck out Ken Singleton for the second out, Montreal

The Mets tied the score in the fourth on a walk to Wayne Garrett, singles by Dave Schneck and Ed Kranepool and Jones' sacrifice fly.

McAndrew left the game after six innings with a blister on the index finger of his pitching hand and Tug McGraw, who pitched the final three innings, got credit for the victory.

Bucs beat Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Richie Hebner's three-run homer highlighted a four-run eighth inning Sunday as the Pittsburgh Pirates topped the Philadelphia Phillies, 7-1.

After the Phils took a 1-0 lead in the seventh on a triple by Greg Luzinski and a single by Willie Montanez, the Pirates took the lead on a Gene Cline single and Al Oliver's two-out double off Barry Lersch.

Dick Selma replaced Lersch and threw a wild pitch while walking Manny Sanguillen on four throws. Then Hebner hit the first pitch for his 10th roundtripper of the season.

Bruce Kison picked up the victory, his fifth in eight decisions with Barry Lersch taking the loss.

Red Sox win opener drop second to Tigers

DETROIT (UPI) — Sore-legged Gates Brown hit a tie-breaking home run in the fifth and drove in another run with a sacrifice fly in a four-run sixth inning of the second game of a Sunday doubleheader to spark the Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 victory after the Boston Red Sox had won the opener 4-3.

John Kennedy, who had been 1-for-21, hit a lazy single to right field to win the first game

Braves sweep L.A.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Ralph Garr's three-run homer in the seventh inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 5-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Sunday and a sweep of their doubleheader.

The Braves took the first game 14-4 on the strength of eight unearned runs.

July weddings highlight social scene

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Vaska
(Capcon Studios)

Vaska-Stefanic

STROUDSBURG — Miss Carol A. Stefanic of 304 A Pine Ave., Stroudsburg, and Frank A. Vaska were married on Tuesday, July 25 at 7 p.m. in St. Luke's Catholic Church, Stroudsburg.

Rev. Robert Gibson officiated at the candlelight nuptial mass. The altar was decorated with an arrangement of white mums.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stefanic of Gilberton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Vaska of Palmerton.

The bride wore a gown of white polyester with set in full sleeves with button-loop cuffs. She wore a mantilla with scalloped edge with lace appliques matching those on her gown. She carried a nosegay of white daisies with white ribbon streamers.

Her sister, Sandra Stefanic of Gilberton, was maid of honor. She wore a pink floor-length A-line gown appliqued with pink and white daisies and carried pink and white daisies tied with pink ribbon.

The bride had designed and made her own gown and veil and that of the maid of honor.

Robert Vaska of Palmerton was his brother's best man.

They are on a wedding tour of the New England States and Canada.

The bride is a 1966 graduate of Mahanoy Area High School and is secretary to the director of sales at Tannment Resort and Country Club. Her husband is a 1965 graduate of Allentown Central Catholic High School. He served in Vietnam as staff sergeant 6 in Special Forces (Green Berets). He is attending East Stroudsburg State College, majoring in political science.

They will make their home at 304 A Pine Ave., Stroudsburg.

Mrs. Gregory Persico

Persico-Corvino

PEN ARGYL — Miss Linda Corvino and Gregory Persico were married on Saturday, July 29 at 11 a.m. in St. Roch's Church, West Bangor.

The bride, a graduate of Pius X High School, is attending East Stroudsburg State College and will graduate in January with a B.S. degree in elementary education.

Her husband, a graduate of Hazleton High School and East Stroudsburg State College with a B.S. in physical education, is teaching in the Hazleton School District.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Gilda Corvino and the late Frank Corvino of 1470 Pine St., Pen Argyl. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Persico, 218 East Third St., Hazleton.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Richard Corvino, and attended by her sister, Miss Frances Corvino. Bridesmaids were Miss Pat Verio, Miss Carmella Zito, Miss Angela Persico, Mrs. Sandra Hoagland. Flower girl was Marie Corvino.

Anthony Persico was his brother's best man. Ushers were James Persico, Wayne Dickenson, Robert Stevens, and Michael Corvino.

A reception was held at the Blue Valley Farm Show Building.

They will be making their home in Hazleton.

Mrs. Clifford E. Shook

Shook-Bowen

EAST STROUDSBURG — Miss Evelyn M. Bowen of 333 Greentree Drive, East Stroudsburg and Clifford E. Shook were married on July 15 at 2 p.m. in the East Stroudsburg United Methodist Church. Rev. Harold C. Eaton officiated before an altar decorated with arrangements of white gladiolas and majestic daisies.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Bowen of R.D. 2 Dalton and is guidance counselor at East Stroudsburg Junior-Senior High School.

Her husband is the son of Mrs. Clifford Shook and the late Mr. Shook of 604 Broadway, Wind Gap and is electronics engineer at the Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N.J. Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a gown of white chiffon trimmed with Alencon lace with high neckline, long bishop sleeves and an attached train. A matching lace Camelot hat held her chapel length veil of imported French illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis and white sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Roberta Martin, sister of the bride, of Spring Lake Heights, N.J., was matron of honor. She wore a blue and green print dress of organza with stand-up collar, empire bodice and long sleeves. She carried a yellow gladiella nosegay.

Patrick Poloni of Pen Argyl was best man. Ushers were Clifford Bowen, brother of the bride, Warmister and Gerald Butz, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Easton.

A reception was held at the Carriage House, East Stroudsburg before the couple left for a wedding trip to Nassau. For traveling the bride wore a lavender double-knit dress.

Mrs. Shook is a graduate of Sayre High School and Drexel University with a master's degree from the Pennsylvania State University and additional graduate work at Lehigh University. Her husband is a graduate of Pen Argyl High School and the Pennsylvania State University.

They will make their home at 427 Normal St., East Stroudsburg.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Everybody is certainly getting uptight about his public image these days. The latest group to have a protest march are the librarians, protesting a cracker ad portraying a town librarian as a prim bespectacled book number.

I don't remember that people used to be so sensitive. Clubwomen, for instance, didn't go out carrying placards reading "Down with Helen Hoskinson" even when she was drawing those devastating cartoons of them as big-buffed, big-busted bumblers, with little intelligence.

And Garden Club members laughed more heartily than anyone else at Cornelia Stabler Gillam's monologue of a Garden Club president getting her lornette, beads and gavel as tangled as the business she was trying to conduct.

The stereotype of women's page editors used to be either a dogmatic arbiter telling a girl she can't choose that weekend for her wedding because somebody else has already picked it or a frustrated young thing trying desperately to break into

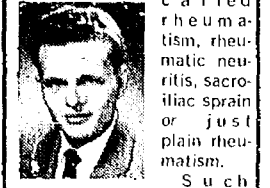

"real" reporting but they were no more incredible than the fictionalized reporters who vanished for weeks from the newsroom on the track of a single story.

Or how about the "typical" housewife in commercials who goes around commenting on people's dingy wash, dandruff, bad breath, irregularity and other rude remarks which might leave her the cleanest woman on her block but also the loneliest in real life.

Well, off the barricades, everybody! If we can't laugh at ourselves, let's make sure that nobody else does either!

LUMBAGO

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder D.C.
Sudden changes in weather such as we are now experiencing, help to bring about painful "catches" in the back. These are sometimes called rheumatism, rheumatic neuritis, sacroiliac sprain or just plain rheumatism. Such pains are often brought about by severe injury or sprain, but may be caused by merely twisting, stooping, lifting, or a shortness of one leg, which would hardly seem severe enough to cause the trouble. The pain may immediately follow the injury, or it may be mild at the onset and grow continually worse. Sometimes the pain may not be felt for weeks or months, but will develop with sudden weather changes as frequently occur in the spring and fall.

All cases, however, present a history of some type of injury which has produced a misalignment of the spine or pelvis, or a shortening of either leg. Chiropractic adjustments correct the misalignment and bring relief in the majority of cases.

It's patio party time and the message is: "Keep it light!"

Particularly where food and drink are concerned. The heavy cheeses, dairy-rich dips and fatty nibbles you might normally serve to a midwinter gathering will only raise the thermostat on a sweltering summer sundown. Calories are heat — a fact often overlooked by the summer hostess.

Drinking and eating go hand-in-hand. It takes only one hand to hold a glass so the other is automatically after potato chips, pretzels or whatever else you have on hand. Even though appetites are flagging, nibbling is such an ingrained party habit that everyone does it, hungry or not. And the more you nibble the more uncomfortable you are. The Slim Gourmet way is to make the nibbles calorie-safe, and, therefore, "air conditioned."

How to "Cool It!"

AVOID cocktail sausage, miniweiners, "pigs-in-a-blanket," smoked meats and other fattening fare!

INSTEAD: Cold shrimp, cracked crab, chilled marinated fish, lump lobster (if you can afford it) chilled fresh tuna (if you can find it), smoked fish or any seafood snacks.

AVOID potent drinks. Save the martinis and Manhattans and other superproof potables for the fireside. With the heat everyone automatically drinks more, so drinks should be light. Especially avoid strong, sweet drinks.

INSTEAD: Tall drinks with lots of ice and soda. Nonsugary wine punches with lots of fruit and juice. And don't forget that sugary mixers add heat-making calories, so have lots of club soda and diet mixers on hand. With everyone weight-watching these days, the host who doesn't have some sort of low-calorie soda is a bit of a klunk!

AVOID sour creamy dips, or those based on mayonnaise or cream cheese — they're 500 to 1,500 calories a cupful or more!

INSTEAD: Add one-half cup buttermilk or skim milk to two cups low-fat cottage cheese and whip it up in your blender. Under 200 calories a cupful. Use this sour-cream stand-in in any favorite dip recipe (for a California Dip simply add a packet of onion soup mix!) even easier and slimmer still: open a container of plain yogurt and stir in your favorite dip-maker. Only 120 calories a cupful.

AVOID greasy chips and shortening-rich crackers. Pretzels are better than potato chips; saltines are better than oily-flecked crackers. Puffy corn type snacks are better still. Or better yet...

County Scouts polish skills at GS camp

SCRANTON — The fourth session of Camp Archbald began on Sunday, July 23, with 13 girls from Monroe County in attendance.

Among the special activities at this period are the Junior Counselor-in-training program and the Basic Aquatic School. The Junior CIT's will practice campcraft and waterfront skills and learn how to work with girls of various ages. These sessions will train them to become counselors.

The girls in the Aquatic School will concentrate on improving their skills in swimming, boating, and canoeing.

Attending from Monroe County are: Stroudsburg, Lynne Miller, Deborah Urban, Jean Urban; Mt. Pocono, Jennifer Roach; Cresco, Christine Larsen; Canadensis, Carol Cavalier; Pocono Summit, Linda Kinsley; Marsha Malachowski; Candace Strauss; Pocono Pines, Carol Ter Meulen; East Stroudsburg, Janis Notz; and Long Pond, Debra Stout.

INSTEAD: Make use of summer's bounty!

Try these fresh chips and dippers: Celery cut in two-inch lengths, raw cauliflower buds, radishes, carrot sticks, pepper rings, cucumber slices (or raw yellow squash and zucchini slices for colorful mix).

Or... pickle chips, sliced canned water chestnuts, apple or pear cubes (leave the skin on for color — easier, too!), fresh or juice-packed pineapple spears. Arrange prettily for eye appeal.

"Keep it light" in what you wear, too... the best way is to have a figure that bears baring. If you have to be all trussed-up and covered over to look your best you'll never enjoy summer!

Controversial methadone works for some addicts

By IDA WALTERS
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
(Editors note: This is the first of a two-part series about the controversial treatment of heroin addicts with methadone.)

NEW YORK — Jack Robbins was, in his words, "reborn" at the age of 25.
That was in 1965, the year Jack enrolled in a methadone maintenance program for heroin addicts. "I thought I'd stay high for the rest of my life and live off welfare," he recalls.

Jack Robbins (not his real name), along with a lot of other people, had little understanding of methadone — a fully addicting synthetic narcotic that produces much the same effect as heroin when injected but that has no discernible effect when taken orally once a day by a "tolerant" person (a tolerant person is one who has built up bodily resistance to the drug through repeated use at the same dosage level).

Jack, however, did understand the likely outcome of his addiction to heroin. Of the five companions with whom he started "shooting" at age 14, three had died of heroin overdoses, one had been killed in a holdup attempt, and the other was in jail.

Jack himself had never held a job. In 11 years, he had been arrested 17 times for drug-related crimes; and three of these arrests had led to treatment in a federal addiction facility.

All told, a fifth of Jack Robbins' addicted life had been spent in jail or in drug-free rehabilitation programs.

But everything failed. After being off heroin for months at a time while in jail, Jack says, he would be back on the drug within days after being released.

Today, at 31, Jack Robbins has been on methadone for five years, and he meets the basic criteria for a methadone success story: He isn't known to use heroin or engage in criminal activity.

In addition, he fulfills the goals of social rehabilitation: a job and a stabilized home life. He became employed as an administrative assistant in a hospital after a few months on methadone, and he has been regularly employed ever since. At the end of the first year, he got married.

He pays taxes, has charge accounts and goes on vacations. Indeed, he's a model, albeit addicted, citizen — and he takes his methadone daily to stay that way.

Jack Robbins, however, is by no means a typical methadone addict; he is, rather, a methadone triumph. But why, since he has broken with the drug way of life, can't he break with the drug? "I'd be afraid to — afraid I'd lose everything I've achieved and wind back up on heroin again," he explains. "I'm doing fine on methadone. Why take chances?"

While such an attitude is understandable to many, it also has its share of detractors. Indeed, the widespread use of methadone has become the center of a growing controversy among various government agencies, law-enforcement officials, social workers, community leaders and, of course, the addicts themselves.

At the heart of the dispute is one nagging question: Is it beneficial for anyone, including addicts, to take one form of addictive drug as a substitute for another?

The question dates back almost a decade to the time when methadone first began to be used in the maintenance treatment of narcotic addicts. The synthetic drug, which was developed by the Germans during World War II as a substitute for morphine, was first used in this country in 1948 to detoxify heroin addicts.

But it was subsequently discovered that a daily oral methadone dosage of 140 to 200 milligrams would maintain, or stabilize, most addicts in a state where the hunger for heroin was eliminated and where the effects of heroin, if injected on top of the methadone, would be blocked.

As low a dose as 30

milligrams daily eliminates drug hunger, but it doesn't prevent a heroin "high" if that drug is subsequently injected.)

Much of the push from methadone proponents to expand methadone clinics has been caused by the alarming increase of heroin addicts in recent years. In the past two or three years the number of heroin addicts in the U.S. doubled, to about 560,000.

Whitelaw stands firm in Ulster

LONDON (UPI)—Protestants and Roman Catholics alike in Northern Ireland call him "Willie Whitelaw."

Each side in the unhappy province accuses him of being "soft" toward the other side.

On his rare public appearances in violence-shattered Belfast and Londonderry he has had to contend with hostile crowds.

Yet William Whitelaw, Britain's secretary of state for Northern Ireland since direct rule was imposed at the end of March, refuses to be intimidated.

British politicians and press are unanimous in describing him as one of the most daunting assignments wished on a politician in recent times.

"There is no question of giving up now," he has said. "There can be no other way but forward. I have not succeeded, but ...

"Having been given the job, I will soldier through," he told parliament recently. "Until I am relieved or until someone else is required, I will soldier through, as is my duty to the country and to this house."

Whitelaw, 54, is a big, bluff man with large ears, sad eyes and eyebrows with a permanent look of disbelief.

He said once of a fellow Conservative party politician that "he looks like a typical, bluff Tory squire. But inside he is as clever as a bag full of monkeys."

British politicians say that is a fair sizeup of Whitelaw himself.

Son of a wealthy Scottish landowning family, Whitelaw was educated at Winchester School and Cambridge University. His academic grades were undistinguished, but he made a mark as captain of the university golf team.

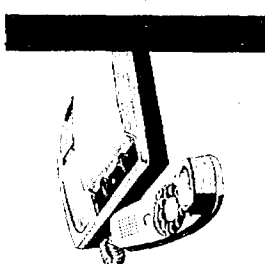

Recently, he was captain of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club at St. Andrews — one of the supreme accolades of the sport in Britain.

He served in the Scots Guards in World War II, managed to get elected to Parliament in 1955 after two unsuccessful tries, and was Conservative party chief whip during most of its period in opposition from 1964-70.

Prime Minister Edward Heath, one of his closest political friends, named him Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons.

In that job he made a name for himself as a conciliator. A television interviewer once described him as "after Mr. Heath the most powerful man in the Tory (Conservative) party."

Controversial methadone works for some addicts

By IDA WALTERS
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
(Editors note: This is the first of a two-part series about the controversial treatment of heroin addicts with methadone.)

NEW YORK — Jack Robbins was, in his words, "reborn" at the age of 25.

That was in 1965, the year Jack enrolled in a methadone maintenance program for heroin addicts. "I thought I'd stay high for the rest of my life and live off welfare," he recalls.

Jack Robbins (not his real name), along with a lot of other people, had little understanding of methadone — a fully addicting synthetic narcotic that produces much the same effect as heroin when injected but that has no discernible effect when taken orally once a day by a "tolerant" person (a tolerant person is one who has built up bodily resistance to the drug through repeated use at the same dosage level).

Jack, however, did understand the likely outcome of his addiction to heroin. Of the five companions with whom he started "shooting" at age 14, three had died of heroin overdoses, one had been killed in a holdup attempt, and the other was in jail.

Jack himself had never held a job. In 11 years, he had been arrested 17 times for drug-related crimes; and three of these arrests had led to treatment in a federal addiction facility.

All told, a fifth of Jack Robbins' addicted life had been spent in jail or in drug-free rehabilitation programs.

But everything failed. After being off heroin for months at a time while in jail, Jack says, he would be back on the drug within days after being released.

Today, at 31, Jack Robbins has been on methadone for five years, and he meets the basic criteria for a methadone success story: He isn't known to use heroin or engage in criminal activity.

In addition, he fulfills the goals of social rehabilitation: a job and a stabilized home life. He became employed as an administrative assistant in a hospital after a few months on methadone, and he has been regularly employed ever since. At the end of the first year, he got married.

He pays taxes, has charge accounts and goes on vacations. Indeed, he's a model, albeit addicted, citizen — and he takes his methadone daily to stay that way.

Jack Robbins, however, is by no means a typical methadone addict; he is, rather, a methadone triumph. But why, since he has broken with the drug way of life, can't he break with the drug? "I'd be afraid to — afraid I'd lose everything I've achieved and wind back up on heroin again," he explains. "I'm doing fine on methadone. Why take chances?"

While such an attitude is understandable to many, it also has its share of detractors. Indeed, the widespread use of methadone has become the center of a growing controversy among various government agencies, law-enforcement officials, social workers, community leaders

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Here is one of the best bridge problems ever composed. Its origin is unknown, but whoever the anonymous composer was, he did a fine job.

It is a double-dummy problem, which means you're expected and entitled to look at all 52 cards in attempting to make the contract. It's also only fair to add that the solution is far from easy. If you'd like to try solving the problem, stop reading right here.

South wins the club lead with the ace, discarding a diamond from dummy, then plays a heart to the jack and discards the king of diamonds on the ace of spades!

He next ruffs a spade, enters dummy with a trump, and ruffs dummy's last spade.

By now, South has played four of his original five trumps. He used two of them to ruff spades, and the other two to cross to dummy. West and North, at this point, each have two trumps, South one.

Declarer now plays a heart to the king, then cashes the ace, discarding the ace of diamonds on it! Eight tricks having been played, dummy's last five cards are all diamonds. Since South by this time has gotten rid of his A-K of diamonds, dummy automatically wins the rest of the tricks.

As anyone can plainly see, the contract is easy to make — after you see how it's done. The key play comes at trick one, when a diamond is discarded from dummy instead of a spade. Declarer then deliberately reduces his trump length so that he can eventually unblock the diamonds.

Another easy hand tomorrow!

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Ocean traveling by luxury ship takes very little special knowledge. Various ships have assorted characters, personalities, moods. The first year the greatest American Atlantic liner, The United States, was in action, a friend of ours took it to Europe, inspected it in detail as was his wont and discovered it was a lavishly camouflaged troopship; its walls were steel painted in pastels, its polite staff amenities cloaked its true functional use — to be shifted in time of war to a great vessel for transporting troops. When said friend returned, we asked what the trip in the maiden year of the United States had been like and he replied, "Like going to Europe on the New Yorker Hotel."

Now, no one ever accused the estimable commercial hotel, The New Yorker, now being turned into a great Manhattan hospital, of being a luxury hotel. Functional, to be sure; luxury, hardly. Traveling on the QE2 is something agreeably else: it's like sailing to Europe aboard The Dorchester, the Savoy, or Claridges, all great London hotels. And if we dwell on the subject of great luxury ocean travel, it's because it was a dream come true when we started taking ships to Europe more than 15 years ago.

We've crossed on the old Liberte, a great French ship now sold for junk; we've been on most Atlantic liners over the last 30 years as traveler or ship news reporter, and these great Atlantic ships have been universally satisfying, including the same old United States, now in mothballs at Norfolk, Va., or some such abeyant storage, awaiting a war it will be ready for, though unlikely in this optimist's lifetime.

But the luxury of ocean liners will continue, also in our optimistic vein; it's our sincere conviction that surface ocean travel never will disappear; diminish it has, but like all the great inventions which seemed set to erase the medium of travel or communications just previous, and haven't, merely adjusted the emphases, we can't see intercontinental airplanes completely removing ocean liners from the marvelously luxurious world every youngster may admire to experience sometime; if George McGovern can make the Presidential nomination, if a drugstore clerk named Hubert can get one toe pointed toward the White House, if a humble store worker named Nixon can call 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. home, then an ultimate ocean voyage is a cinch. Especially if this unfrocked gravedigger and dock wallop can make it.

And so our tips on traveling on the ocean giants are few and simple: don't be wary of the seeming hysteria of boarding; the QE2 swallows up a couple thousand travelers within a few hours dockside. There will be enough help there for all. Our serendipity years ago was unusual, we admit. We'd interviewed a youngish waterfront dock wallop named Ray Skarica because his interests went considerably beyond luggage toting. We learned he not only served on the Cunard dock, but owned a karate school in Queens on Long Island, taught that esoteric violence to men and women, the latter expanding their interest in self defense with every new tale of a mugger in the papers. Ray Skarica also taught judo and the French science of Savate, in which the educated toe is used for more than a ballet dancer's en pointe; it can, in the case of a skilled Savate student, enable you to dropkick an assailant into the happy world of unconsciousness. With Ray's total expertise assimilated by a student, man or woman, a trip through Central Park might even seem a convenient al fresco workout at the gym. Ray also now promotes prizefighting on Long Island.

It was through our prior meetings with Ray Skarica that our arrivals shipside at the Cunard dock (once at 54th St. and the North River, now at 44th St.) took on the simplest method of boarding. Ray pointed out it was just the friendly face that caused us to think we were being raced through magically.

"See that family there," he pointed to a group of four. "They're getting a complete stranger to take their luggage. Watch," and we did; the family got aboard the QE2 at the same moment we did. So that is no problem.

Arrival at Southampton in England or Cherbourg in France is equally simple. Your room steward and stewardess do all the work, will even pack for you; and foreign immigration and customs inspection is not even close to the necessarily finicky attention paid to your bags on your return to the United States.

We almost always return by plane; the new 747s are faster and more comfortable of course than the old 707s or the first planes we took across oceans, the DC6s and DC7s. You get the Jet Lag on return, of course, and it's our suggestion that you don't return by air the day before you go back to work. Otherwise you'll be a zombie for the several days it takes to attain a normal compatibility with your alarm clock.

Marty Allen has been trying to make it in movies for a decade. Finally he does: co-starred with some fish in "Whale of a Tale" . . . Unlike his cafe act, he promises it will be "clean family entertainment." Why not try that in a nightclub; it would be a fantastically unusual novelty.

"Try to Remember" is a pretty tune from "The Fantasticks," but the Jerome Kern-Otto Harbach "Try to Forget" cuts it for beauty, melody, lyrics and durability.

"I've always admired the neat, orderly atmosphere of the mobile, travel homes . . . the rows of neat cupboards, the uncluttered aisle through the kitchen, the smooth beds and the husband at the doorway holding a stringer of trout.

If we lived in a mobile home, there would have to be some changes. The kids would have to be equipped with hinges so they could be folded up and stacked like snack trays. The drawers would have to be glued shut. And I would have to lose about 30 pounds or dangle my feet in the sink a lot.

We have had only one experience with mobile living. It was a 23-foot travel trailer we took on the road for six weeks. It wasn't my idea. When I die if there is no room service, I won't go.

Anyway, my husband stacked the driveway with camping gear, emergency equipment, clothes, food, utensils, blankets, extra chairs, and an inflated life raft and said, "Will all this fit?"

"Sure," I smiled. "But we won't."

Looking back, there were a few things that could have been changed. First, we never seemed to park the trailer on level ground. Two kids slept on the converted kitchen table, one hung like a bat from the ceiling and my husband and I each had a single bed. One night I said to him, "I think we are listing more than usual. I just tried to lie down and I still feel like I am being buried at sea."

Then, we never seemed to have organization like the rest of the campers. Little things. Like we'd forget to secure the refrigerator and the cupboard doors. We wouldn't remember it at all until we made a sudden stop and felt the quake. Then all of us would look at one another and try to figure out who was to blame for the syrup in the tennis shoes and the milk in the soap powder.

Every morning my husband grumbled. "Why do you insist on a centerpiece when we are roughing it?"

"That is not a centerpiece. It is your son. Get up! It's 5 a.m. You want to blow your whole day?"

We never seemed to have enough room to maneuver. In order to turn off the light, I had to stand on my son's face. To open the door, two people had to go in the closet and stand. To take a shower, you had to stand in a life raft. If I told them once, I told them a million times. "A place for everything; everything in its place." The rules were rigid. When my husband appeared at the door one night with a stringer of trout, we told him, "Don't press your luck by bringing home guests. We are all expendable, you know."

$1.86 million more will be received

SS benefits jump for residents

Special to The Record
STROUDSBURG — The record increase in Social Security payments, recently passed by Congress, will add approximately $1,860,000 a year to the amount local residents have been collecting.

For the last four months of 1972, covering the period after September 1 when the hike goes into effect, the increase will be about $620,000.

The figures are based upon the latest statistics for the country, released by the Social Security Administration. They show the number of retired or disabled workers on the pension rolls, as well as their dependents, and the amounts paid them.

All of these people will benefit as a result of the new legislation. Retired workers who are unmarried will receive an average of $1,932 a year instead of $1,596. Retired couples will average $3,340, as against $2,676 at present.

The new maximum for retired couples will average $4,632, compared with $3,888 now. The maximum for the single worker will rise to $3,096 from the current $2,592.

As of the beginning of last year, pension payments in Monroe County averaged $1,298 per recipient per year, the Social Security Administration reports. Under the new setup, recipients will collect approximately $1,557 a year, on the average.

Total payments throughout the area, based upon the number of people on the pension rolls at least count, will amount to $11,160,000 during the next day, a considerable rise over the last reported total of $9,300,000.

Under the new legislation, starting in 1974 there will be automatic increases in benefits whenever the consumer price index rises three per cent or more. There would also be automatic increases in the wage base at such times to provide the necessary financing.

Local Republicans attend fete

STROUDSBURG — Several prominent Monroe County Republicans were among the more than 800 Republicans from Pennsylvania who attended an ox roast recently.

The roast was sponsored by the Republican State Committee as a fund raising activity to reduce its general debt. Tickets cost $100 per plate for men and $25 for women.

Local Republicans who attended are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Katz, Mrs. Ruth Slutler, James Joseph, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Driebe, Attorney Philip Santucci and Bruce Anderson.

Among those in attendance were Arlen Specter, chairman of the Re-Elect the President Committee for Pennsylvania; Specter's executive officer, Herman Bloom; Senator Richard Schweiker; Martin Hamburger, representing Senator Hugh Scott; Clifford Jones, chairman of the Republican State Committee; Stanley Miller, secretary of education and welfare during the Shafer administration, was chairman of the ox roast.

U.S. changes meal guidelines

WASHINGTON — Amended regulations to permit greater flexibility in meeting nutritional requirements for meals served under its several child nutrition programs were recently proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The changes would permit certain variations in the required food components of federally-reimbursed meals served to children in the National School Lunch.

Tough guys

All of the carrier boys who have delivered The Pocono Record throughout the tough months of January, February and March were given a treat: a trip to see the Philadelphia Phillies play the Chicago Cubs at the new Veterans Stadium. These carriers are called the "Tough Guys" and embark on the bus for the trip to Philadelphia.

$1.86 million more will be received

SS benefits jump for residents

Special to The Record
STROUDSBURG — The record increase in Social Security payments, recently passed by Congress, will add approximately $1,860,000 a year to the amount local residents have been collecting.

For the last four months of 1972, covering the period after September 1 when the hike goes into effect, the increase will be about $620,000.

The figures are based upon the latest statistics for the country, released by the Social Security Administration. They show the number of retired or disabled workers on the pension rolls, as well as their dependents, and the amounts paid them.

All of these people will benefit as a result of the new legislation. Retired workers who are unmarried will receive an average of $1,932 a year instead of $1,596. Retired couples will average $3,340, as against $2,676 at present.

The new maximum for retired couples will average $4,632, compared with $3,888 now. The maximum for the single worker will rise to $3,096 from the current $2,592.

As of the beginning of last year, pension payments in Monroe County averaged $1,298 per recipient per year, the Social Security Administration reports. Under the new setup, recipients will collect approximately $1,557 a year, on the average.

Total payments throughout the area, based upon the number of people on the pension rolls at least count, will amount to $11,160,000 during the next day, a considerable rise over the last reported total of $9,300,000.

Under the new legislation, starting in 1974 there will be automatic increases in benefits whenever the consumer price index rises three per cent or more. There would also be automatic increases in the wage base at such times to provide the necessary financing.

Local Republicans attend fete

STROUDSBURG — Several prominent Monroe County Republicans were among the more than 800 Republicans from Pennsylvania who attended an ox roast recently.

The roast was sponsored by the Republican State Committee as a fund raising activity to reduce its general debt. Tickets cost $100 per plate for men and $25 for women.

College honor

SCRANTON — Alice Shukaitis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shukaitis, R.D. 1 East Stroudsburg, has been named to the second dean's list for the spring semester at Marywood College.

Local Republicans who attended are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Katz, Mrs. Ruth Sluter, James Joseph, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Driebe, Attorney Philip Santucci and Bruce Anderson.

Among those in attendance were Arlen Specter, chairman of the Re-Elect the President Committee for Pennsylvania; Specter's executive officer, Herman Bloom; Senator Richard Schweiker; Martin Ham-burger, representing Senator Hugh Scott; Clifford Jones, chairman of the Republican State Committee. Stanley Miller, secretary of education and welfare during the Shafer administration, was chairman of the ox roast.

U.S. changes meal guidelines

WASHINGTON — Amended regulations to permit greater flexibility in meeting nutritional requirements for meals served under its several child nutrition programs were recently proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The changes would permit certain variations in the required food components of federally-reimbursed meals served to children in the National School Lunch.

Write to know

The people in The Pocono Record circulation area have a "Write to Know" — and The Record will try to provide the answers in the "Write to Know" column. The column, designed to answer any questions or solve any problems (consumer, government or anything else) will appear every Monday on the first page of the second section. Send all questions to "Write to Know," The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360. Questions should be in writing and signed. No telephone calls, please.

Q. — I am currently enrolled in a Pennsylvania State Retirement Plan. I have intentions of changing the beneficiary to my 14-year-old son and appointing his sister, who is 18, as his guardian. Is this legal in the state of Pennsylvania?

Mrs. V.T., Stroudsburg

A. — As far as insurance policies are concerned, you may name whomever you wish as beneficiary. We cannot offer any legal advice concerning the appointment of your daughter as his legal guardian. This is a matter that must be taken care of in the form of a will and you should consult an attorney for a sound legal reading.

Q. — I received a summons to appear in court for an alleged traffic violation which supposedly occurred in April. I brought a witness and proved this charge to be a case of mistaken identity. The charge cost me $28.67 in lost wages and other expenses. Is there any way I can get the person who brought this charge against me to reimburse me for this amount?

V.D., Mount Pocono

A. — We cannot provide you with legal advice in this matter. You should contact the Peace Justice or District Magistrate who handled your case and find out what your chances are of recovering the money you lost in expenses. It is most likely, however, if there is some way for you to be reimbursed it will probably cost you more to get it than $28.67.

Recently the Record's "Write to Know" column has been receiving many questions seeking medical and legal advice. Due to the complexity and individuality of each question there is no possible way we can furnish bonafide solutions or answers. Lutheran Assn. marks 50th anniversary fete CRESCO — The Paradise Falls Lutheran Association is currently celebrating its 50th anniversary with a schedule of activities until August 5.

An anniversary worship service was held Sunday morning, with Dr. William Lazareth, Dean of the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, celebrant. The liturgy was given by Paul Ohi, a charter member of the association.

At 8 p.m. today, Jacob Kintz, historian and lecturer from Marshalls Creek, will give a talk on folklore of the Poconos at the social hall.

An anniversary breakfast, sponsored by the executive committee of the Women's Auxiliary, will be held in the lounge from 8:30 to 11 a.m. Tuesday. The opening of the historical highlights display is set to be opened at 7 p.m. in the lounge.

The historical highlights will be on display from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, in the lounge.

A reunion program will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday and old time Paradise Falls movies and slides will be shown in the social hall at 8 p.m.

A family Halloween party and square dance, featuring "Uncle Bert" Hovey as caller, is planned for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the rear of the gate lodge.

A program of rock, rhythm, and rhapsody is scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday at the social hall. Saturday night, at 8, a rock concert featuring "The Horizon" and "The Astros" will be held.

The 50th anniversary will conclude on Labor Day Sunday with the dedication of the Anniversary Tree and a contemporary communion service.

Expansion by Pocono Airlines may include local Mt. Pocono flights

STROUDSBURG — Scheduled airline service for the Mount Pocono Airport may become a reality as a result of Pocono Airlines' decision to spend $85,000 to augment the general aviation program at the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton Airport, Avoca.

Dan Yatsko, chief flight instructor for Pocono Airlines at Avoca, said service to Mount Pocono and other points was a "possibility" for the near future if adequate demand for scheduled flights developed.

Walter Hoffman, owner of Pocono Airlines, was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Pocono Airlines is currently under contract to fly Allegheny Airlines commuter flights from Avoca to New York City. The commuter flights presently fly via Hazelton. Plans have been made to increase the number of daily flights from four to six, beginning Oct. 1, said Yatsko.

Pocono Airlines several years ago maintained regular commuter flights from Mount Pocono Airport to metropolitan airports such as Philadelphia and Newark. The service had been terminated, however, due to both lack of passengers and disagreements with the fixed base operator of the airport at that time.

Pocono Airlines still maintains the franchise for commuter services at Mount Pocono Airport.

Daniel Balish, manager of Pocono Airlines, cited the exodus of private and corporate aircraft from the Wyoming Valley Airport because of the flood as a reason for his firm's expansion. Wyoming Valley Airport is being used as a staging area for trailers being shipped into the region and about 90 per cent of the planes formerly based there are now at the facility in Avoca.

Balish sees the need for additional hangar facilities covering about 15,000 square feet, in order to handle the expansion of Pocono Airlines, with a goal of 200 private and corporate planes.

Currently, the firm's hangar and parking area for private and corporate aircraft covers 12,500 feet. Pocono Airlines employs nine full time pilots and eight to 10 full time mechanics.

Balish told the board of control at the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton Airport that the future success of the facility rests with general aviation, which will "generate more revenue and help concessionaires."

The general aviation area is at the west end of the terminal building and complex with private hangars. The general aviation area of the airport proper was closed to private and corporate aircraft during the flood to permit military craft to unload food and equipment.

Private hangars were used for distribution of clothing for flood victims.

Craft village fair draws 6,000 people

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

PETERS VALLEY — The "village smithy" along with other not so popularized artisans of the past were brought to life Saturday and Sunday at the Peters Valley Crafts Fair in Peters Valley, N.J.

The fair marks the second anniversary of the Peters Valley Craftsman, a non-profit, educational organization of private citizens, working cooperatively with the National Park Service and the New Jersey Council on the Arts in the establishment and operation of the Peters Valley Crafts Village.

According to Britt Puleo, fair committee chairman, a total of 37 exhibitors participated in the fair representing wood design, wood carving, ceramics, blacksmithing, weaving, macramé, crocheting, leather work, sculpture, jewelry making, and stitching.

President of the Craftsman

Assn., Sally Francisco, noted "nearly 6,000 people have come to the fair during the two days it has been in progress, which far surpasses last year's attendance."

She described the fair as "extremely successful," and said the craftsmen had probably made enough money in an auction to buy a clay mixing machine for their school.

"We have been mixing our pottery clay by hand in large barrels, but by each of our craftsmen donating a piece of work for an auction I think we have earned enough money to buy a new machine," she said.

She pointed out Peters Valley Craft Village is a living center devoted to education in handicrafts of all kinds. Skilled craftsmen live year-round in the village, producing, demonstrating and selling their craft articles.

The school at the village offers a wide variety of courses in handicrafts which are taught by resident and visiting craftsmen.

Andrew J. Willner, a teacher and furniture designer at the fair, said twice as many students have enrolled in the crafts school as last year.

Some of his exhibits are unique tables and chairs, including one "tall chair" specially made for a customer who wanted his chair to fit his height.

"I try to personalize everything I build. I don't advertise my work, but instead would rather meet personally with people," he said.

A small card lying beside his exhibits briefly describes the pride of a craftsman by stating, "My philosophy is furniture should not only be used to sit on, put things in or on, but it should also be something fine and sensuous to look at and feel."

Other craftsmen at the fair heartily agree with this philosophy and inform visitors of the pride in their work by presenting demonstrations.

Gerald Ely, a woodcarver, showed interested onlookers how to carve a wooden bowl, and warned eager neophytes to keep their hands off the wood while carving.

"Your tools should always be sharp when carving," he said, "and both hands should be on the tool. I know most people have a tendency to put their thumb in the bottom of the bowl to hold the wood, but in all probability your thumb will remain there for good if this is done," he said.

Other demonstrations were given in weaving, macramé, and blacksmithing. Probably, the best demonstration, at least for youngsters, was held at the pottery exhibit where children were allowed to work with clay. Most kids not only worked clay but also ate it, wore it, smeared it, and transformed themselves into clay statues, perhaps for next year's fair.

Near perfect driving record

STROUDSBURG — Despite crowded conditions on Monroe County highways, due to the Schaefer and Pennsylvania 500 races, area state police barracks experienced an accident-free week-end.

Other than a minor "fender-bender" incident early Sunday morning near Stroudsburg, state police at Stroudsburg, Mt. Pocono, Fern Ridge, Milford, and Lehighton all reported "everything quiet."

LONG POND — As he stood near the refreshment lounge in the V.I.P. room high above the Pocono International Raceway, Sp. 5 William Reynolds smiled and said, "This is the best duty I've ever had."

Reynolds was one of 15 men from the 579th Military Police Battalion, Fort Dix, N.J., to be assigned "duty" at the raceway for the Schaefer 500 at Pocono and the Pennsylvania 500.

Under the command of Captain Gerard Morpurgo, the men "volunteered" to assist with security and traffic control duties at the raceway over the weekend. The show of force was to promote the new "volunteer Army" concept.

Capt. Morpurgo explained that all of the Army's units must make an effort to recruit new men for themselves rather than rely on overall Army recruitment to fill their ranks.

Morpurgo stated the goal of the Ft. Dix MP Battalion is to reach a strength of 1,500 volunteers by June, 1973. They hope to find these new volunteers through their own efforts, such as the appearance of the group at the raceway.

"We're not actually here to recruit anyone," he said. "We hope to get the word out with publicity. If someone sees us here and asks about it, then we tell them. We also have a Choice-Mobile here."

The "choice-mobile" is a mobile information center that carries an array of electronic equipment, posters and information packages about "Today's Army." Set up strictly on the military police approach, it even has a fully uniformed mannequin sporting all the equipment of the military-man-on-the-beat wears.

"It's a pretty good deal," says Morpurgo. "Today a man can enlist in the Army with his unit of choice. This means he can pick his job and the unit he wants to serve with."

He pointed out that most law enforcement agencies require applicants to be at least 21 years old. After the basic age requirement, the better jobs limit applicants to those with some previous experience.

"If a man were to join after he got out of high school for a three year enlistment, he'd be 21 plus have experience when he finished his tour of duty."

Morpurgo also explained the would-be enlistee is guaranteed at least 20 months of service with his unit of choice before he is subject to transfer. First comes two months of basic training, then two months of advanced training and one month of field duty at Ft. Dix, if he chose the 579th.

"After that," said the captain, "he'd assume the regular duties we fulfill. We rotate the men on a regular basis so each man gets a chance to come to a place like this."

The 579th has been actively engaged in its promotion trips since February of this year. They've traveled all over the New England States to centennials, fairs and other celebrations with their "choice-mobile" and have successfully recruited over 300 men so far. All are assigned with the MP Battalion.

Anyone interested in the program need not wait until the "choice-mobile" returns to the area. They can enlist in the MP Battalion with any Army recruiter and enjoy the same benefits.

"If we keep at the rate we're going now," says Morpurgo, "we shouldn't have any trouble reaching 1,500 men by next June."

Life sure has its ups and downs for 'Twinkles'

By JOE DeVIVO

POCONO RECORD REPORTER
ECHO LAKE — Hanging upside down from a 150-foot crane, while fitted in a strait-jacket, can make any man have a sour outlook on life.

Not so for Ted Coffin, 25, a person with a very "twinkling" personality.

Coffin, better known as Twinkles the Clown, has been entertaining people since he was 12 as a fire-eater, magician, animal trainer, escape artist, and comedian. "Twinkles" is currently appearing at Old MacDonald's Farm, Route 209, Echo Lake.

"I'll always enjoy making people happy," said "Twinkles." "I'll never quit being an entertainer."

"Twinkles" got his start 13 years ago, when he ran away from home to join the circus. "I used to go to the circus and enjoyed seeing the clowns make people laugh," Twinkles remarked.

After starting out doing odd jobs around the big top for $12 a week, plus room and board, Coffin was billed as "the human volcano," a fire-eater in the side show. He also learned how to do magic and escapes from strait-jackets and handcuffs.

Coffin soon realized "the sideshow wasn't good enough" and wanted to be in the center ring. His break came when an extra clown was needed for a show for school children. Four days were spent just learning to put the make-up on and Twinkles the Clown was born.

During the New York World's Fair, "Twinkles" served as the official host for the Belgium Village. In 1966, he was appointed producing clown for Hunt Bros. Circus. At that time, he was billed as the youngest producing clown in any circus.

The producing clown designs and creates the clown acts for all the other clowns in the show, quite an honor for a young performer.

Little dab will do

"Twinkles" later appeared in the Clyde Beatty & Cole Bros. Circus and Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus.

In 1967, "Twinkles" began working with Joe Frisco, famed animal trainer, and worked with a number of Shrine Circuses in a wild animal act. He got in the arena with three lions and two tigers at one time, working as a lion tamer.

The act was then sold to another circus, which had its own lion tamer, ending "Twinkles'" experiences in that venture.

"I wanted to do something better," said Coffin, so in 1969 he went to Hawaii. A television station needed a children's program, but lacked an idea or any sponsors.

Within four days, "Twinkles" wrote a show and acquired his own sponsors. For a year-and-a-half, he produced, directed, sold time, and starred in "Twinkles' Big Top."

Coffin is confident if he had the sponsors, he could create another entertaining show.

Easy does it

"There aren't four good kids' television shows on the air today," Coffin complained. "Most of the shows are either all cartoons or try to educate children at too young of an age," he said.

"Television should be entertainment for children." On his show, "Twinkles" featured something different every day, ranging from story telling to presenting animals.

"We used very few cartoons," he remarked.

Fantasy important

Fantasy is very important to a child, according to "Twinkles." "If a child loses fantasy, he loses his childhood, and matures too early," he stated.

"Every child will experience the joy of childhood if I can do anything about it," Twinkles said.

Voila! It's Twinkles

Farm, Wednesday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Twinkles" also does magic shows for the children who visit the farm, where he will be working until Labor Day.

An anniversary breakfast, sponsored by the executive committee of the Women's Auxiliary, will be held in the lounge from 8:30 to 11 a.m. Tuesday. The opening of the historical highlights display is set to be opened at 7 p.m. in the lounge.

The historical highlights will be on display from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, in the lounge.

A reunion program will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday and old time Paradise Falls movies and slides will be shown in the social hall at 8 p.m.

A family Halloween party and square dance, featuring "Uncle Bert" Hovey as caller, is planned for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the rear of the gate lodge.

A program of rock, rhythm, and rhapsody is scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday at the social hall. Saturday night, at 8, a rock concert featuring "The Horizon" and "The Astros" will be held.

The 50th anniversary will conclude on Labor Day Sunday with the dedication of the Anniversary Tree and a contemporary communion service.

Expansion by Pocono Airlines may include local Mt. Pocono flights

STROUDSBURG — Scheduled airline service for the Mount Pocono Airport may become a reality as a result of Pocono Airlines' decision to spend $85,000 to augment the general aviation program at the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton Airport, Avoca.

Dan Yatsko, chief flight instructor for Pocono Airlines at Avoca, said service to Mount Pocono and other points was a "possibility" for the near future if adequate demand for scheduled flights developed.

Walter Hoffman, owner of Pocono Airlines, was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Pocono Airlines is currently under contract to fly Allegheny Airlines commuter flights from Avoca to New York City. The commuter flights presently fly via Hazelton. Plans have been made to increase the number of daily flights from four to six, beginning Oct. 1, said Yatsko.

Pocono Airlines several years ago maintained regular commuter flights from Mount Pocono Airport to metropolitan airports such as Philadelphia and Newark. The service had been terminated, however, due to both lack of passengers and disagreements with the fixed base operator of the airport at that time.

Pocono Airlines still maintains the franchise for commuter services at Mount Pocono Airport.

Daniel Balish, manager of Pocono Airlines, cited the exodus of private and corporate aircraft from the Wyoming Valley Airport because of the flood as a reason for his firm's expansion. Wyoming Valley Airport is being used as a staging area for trailers being shipped into the region and about 90 per cent of the planes formerly based there are now at the facility in Avoca.

Balish sees the need for additional hangar facilities covering about 15,000 square feet, in order to handle the expansion of Pocono Airlines, with a goal of 200 private and corporate planes.

Currently, the firm's hangar and parking area for private and corporate aircraft covers 12,500 feet. Pocono Airlines employs nine full time pilots and eight to 10 full time mechanics.

Balish told the board of control at the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton Airport that the future success of the facility rests with general aviation, which will "generate more revenue and help concessionaires."

The general aviation area is at the west end of the terminal building and complex with private hangars. The general aviation area of the airport proper was closed to private and corporate aircraft during the flood to permit military craft to unload food and equipment.

Private hangars were used for distribution of clothing for flood victims.

Craft village fair draws 6,000 people

PETERS VALLEY — The "village smithy" along with other not so popularized artisans of the past were brought to life Saturday and Sunday at the Peters Valley Crafts Fair in Peters Valley, N.J.

The fair marks the second anniversary of the Peters Valley Craftsmen, a non-profit, educational organization of private citizens, working cooperatively with the National Park Service and the New Jersey Council on the Arts in the establishment and operation of the Peters Valley Crafts Village.

According to Britt Puleo, fair committee chairman, a total of 37 exhibitors participated in the fair representing wood design, woodcarving, ceramics, blacksmithing, weaving, macrame, crocheting, leather work, sculpture, jewelry making, and stitchery.

President of the Craftsman

Assn., Sally Francisco, noted "nearly 6,000 people have come to the fair during the two days it has been in progress, which far surpasses last year's attendance."

She described the fair as "extremely successful," and said the craftsmen had probably made enough money in an auction to buy a clay mixing machine for their school.

"We have been mixing our pottery clay by hand in large barrels, but by each of our craftsmen donating a piece of work for an auction I think we have earned enough money to buy a new machine," she said.

She pointed out Peters Valley Craft Village is a living center devoted to education in handicrafts of all kinds. Skilled craftsmen live year-round in the village, producing, demonstrating and selling their craft articles.

The school at the village offers a wide variety of courses in handicrafts which are taught by resident and visiting craftsmen.

Andrew J. Willner, a teacher and furniture designer at the fair, said twice as many students have enrolled in the crafts school as last year.

Some of his exhibits are unique tables and chairs, including one "tall chair" specially made for a customer who wanted his chair to fit his height.

"I try to personalize everything I build. I don't advertise my work, but instead would rather meet personally with people," he said.

A small card lying beside his exhibits briefly describes the pride of a craftsman by stating, "My philosophy is furniture should not only be used to sit on, put things in or on, but it should also be something fine and sensuous to look at and feel."

Other craftsmen at the fair heartily agree with this philosophy and inform visitors of the pride in their work by presenting demonstrations.

Gerald Ely, a woodcarver, showed interested onlookers how to carve a wooden bowl, and warned eager neophytes to keep their hands off the wood while carving.

"Your tools should always be sharp when carving," he said, "and both hands should be on the tool. I know most people have a tendency to put their thumb in the bottom of the bowl to hold the wood, but in all probability your thumb will remain there for good if this is done," he said.

Other demonstrations were given in weaving, macrame, and blacksmithing. Probably, the best demonstration, at least for youngsters, was held at the pottery exhibit where children were allowed to work with clay. Most kids not only worked clay but also ate it, wore it, smeared it, and transformed themselves into clay statuettes, perhaps for next year's fair.

Near perfect driving record

STROUDSBURG — Despite crowded conditions on Monroe County highways, due to the Schaefer and Pennsylvania 500 races, area state police barracks experienced an accident-free week-end.

Other than a minor "fender-bender" incident early Sunday morning near Stroudsburg, state police at Stroudsburg, Mt. Pocono, Fern Ridge, Milford, and Lehighton all reported "everything quiet."

LONG POND — As he stood near the refreshment lounge in the V.I.P. room high above the Pocono International Raceway, Sp. 5 William Reynolds smiled and said, "This is the best duty I've ever had."

Reynolds was one of 15 men from the 579th Military Police Battalion, Fort Dix, N.J., to be assigned "duty" at the raceway for the Schaefer 500 at Pocono and the Pennsylvania 500.

Under the command of Captain Gerard Morpurgo, the men "volunteered" to assist with security and traffic control duties at the raceway over the weekend. The show of force was to promote the new "volunteer Army" concept.

Capt. Morpurgo explained that all of the Army's units must make an effort to recruit new men for themselves rather than rely on overall Army recruitment to fill their ranks.

Morpurgo stated the goal of the Ft. Dix MP battalion is to reach a strength of 1,500 volunteers by June, 1973. They hope to find these new volunteers through their own efforts, such as the appearance of the group at the raceway.

"We're not actually here to

The "choice-mobile" is a mobile information center that carries an array of electronic equipment, posters and information packages about "Today's Army." Set up strictly on the military police approach, it even has a fully uniformed mannequin sporting all the equipment of the military-man-on-the-beat wears.

"It's a pretty good deal," says Morpurgo. "Today a man can enlist in the Army with his unit of choice." This means he can pick his job and the unit he wants to serve with.

He pointed out that most law enforcement agencies require applicants to be at least 21 years old. After the basic age requirement, the better jobs limit applicants to those with some previous experience.

"If a man were to join after he got out of high school for a three year enlistment, he'd be 21 plus have experience when he finished his tour of duty."

Morpurgo also explained the would-be enlistee is guaranteed at least 20 months of service with his unit of choice before he is subject to transfer. First comes two months of basic training, then two months of advanced training and one month of field duty at Ft. Dix, if he chose the 579th.

"After that," said the captain, "he'd assume the regular duties we fulfill. We rotate the men on a regular basis so each man gets a chance to come to a place like this."

The 579th has been actively engaged in its promotion trips since February of this year. They've traveled all over the New England States to centennials, fairs and other celebrations with their "choice-mobile" and have successfully recruited over 300 men so far. All are assigned with the MP battalion.

Anyone interested in the program need not wait until the "choice-mobile" returns to the area. They can enlist in the MP battalion with any Army recruiter and enjoy the same benefits.

"If we keep at the rate we're going now," says Morpurgo, "we shouldn't have any trouble reaching 1,500 men by next June."

Life sure has its ups and downs for 'Twinkles'

By JOE DeVIVO

ECHO LAKE — Hanging upside down from a 150-foot crane, while fitted in a strait-jacket, can make any man have a sour outlook on life.

Not so for Ted Coffin, 25, a person with a very "twinkling" personality.

Coffin, better known as Twinkles the Clown, has been entertaining people since he was 12 as a fire-eater, magician, animal trainer, escape artist, and comedian. "Twinkles" is currently appearing at Old MacDonald's Farm, Route 209, Echo Lake.

"I'll always enjoy making people happy," said "Twinkles." "I'll never quit being an entertainer."

"Twinkles" got his start 13 years ago, when he ran away from home to join the circus. "I used to go to the circus and enjoyed seeing the clowns make people laugh," Twinkles remarked.

After starting out doing odd jobs around the big top for $12 a week, plus room and board, Coffin was billed as "the human volcano," a fire-eater in the side show. He also learned how to do magic and escapes from strait-jackets and handcuffs.

Coffin soon realized "the sideshow wasn't good enough" and wanted to be in the center ring. His break came when an extra clown was needed for a show for school children. Four days were spent just learning to put the make-up on and Twinkles the Clown was born.

During the New York World's Fair, "Twinkles" served as the official host for the Belgium Village. In 1966, he was appointed producing clown for Hunt Bros. Circus. At that time, he was billed as the youngest producing clown in any circus.

The producing clown designs and creates the clown acts for all the other clowns in the show, quite an honor for a young performer.

"Twinkles" later appeared in the Clyde Beatty & Cole Bros. Circus and Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus.

In 1967, "Twinkles" began working with Joe Frisco, famed animal trainer, and worked with a number of Shrine Circuses in a wild animal act. He got in the arena with three lions and two tigers at one time, working as a lion tamer.

The act was then sold to another circus, which had its own lion tamer, ending "Twinkles'" experiences in that venture.

"I wanted to do something better," said Coffin, so in 1969 he went to Hawaii. A television station needed a children's program, but lacked an idea or any sponsors.

Within four days, "Twinkles" wrote a show and acquired his own sponsors. For a year-and-a-half, he produced, directed, sold time, and starred in "Twinkles' Big Top."

Coffin is confident if he had the sponsors, he could create another entertaining show.

Easy does it

"There aren't four good kids' television shows on the air today," Coffin complained. "Most of the shows are either all cartoons or try to educate children at too young of an age," he said. "The clown believes television should be entertainment for children." On his show, "Twinkles" featured something different every day, ranging from story telling to presenting animals.

"We used very few cartoons," he remarked.

Fantasy important

Fantasy is very important to a child, according to "Twinkles." "If a child loses fantasy, he loses his childhood, and matures too early," he stated.

"Every child will experience the joy of childhood if I can do anything about it," Twinkles said.

Voila! It's Twinkles

Farm, Wednesday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Twinkles also does magic shows for the children who visit the farm, where he will be working until Labor Day.

Posey wins rookie award

LONG POND — Sam Posey, Sharon, Conn., was awarded the "Mario Andretti rookie of the year" award for his fifth place finish in Saturday's Schaefer 500.

Posey, who completed 190 of the 200 laps, was named the winner of the award presented by the Nazareth Jaycees after being elected by sportswriters.

Leonard wins in confusing Schaefer 500

By CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — Nearly all of the 70,000 persons at Pocono International Raceway Saturday knew who won the second running of the Schaefer 500.

But it took the United States Auto Club nearly one hour to declare Joe Leonard the winner.

Leonard, fresh off a victory in the Michigan 200, took the lead on the 164th lap from Mario Andretti of Nazareth and roared his Parnelli Offy to a record speed of 154.781 miles per hour.

Mark Donohue had set the standard last year when he won with an average of 138.649.

Al Unser, who had started with Leonard in the second row of the race, was given the checkered flag and the crowd had to wait until USAC timers and scorers studied their tapes and gave the win to Leonard.

The confusion occurred when Unser, driving another Parnelli Offy, passed

Johnny Rutherford on the 173rd lap under the yellow flag. The yellow came out when Jimmy Caruthers, Anaheim, Calif., hit the wall coming out of the third turn.

With leader Leonard in the pits and Rutherford the first car in line behind the pace car on the track, USAC became confused and had Unser leading the rest of the race. But on the 172nd lap, Unser was running in third place seven seconds behind Rutherford.

Suddenly USAC had him a four-second leader a lap later. The Parnelli Jones team also had Leonard winning the race. Unofficially, Unser would have had to make up 4:18.4 he lost in pit stop time to Leonard.

For passing under the yellow, Dick King, competition director for USAC, penalized Unser one lap and placed him third behind Leonard and Rutherford.

"It was a clear track," Leonard said after taking the winner's share of the nearly $400,000 purse. "The track was surprisingly good for the entire race."

With Bobby Unser sitting on the pole after setting a record qualifying speed of 189.473, Andretti, the third member of the "Super Team," took the lead on the green flag. But after that it was anybody's race with the lead changing seven more times before Gary Bettenhausen, Donohue's teammate in his Sunoco Special, settled down to become the rabbit on the ninth lap.

Bobby Unser, who had sat on the pole for the eighth straight time, got a taste of the bad luck which was to hit his Olsonite Eagle when the left rear tire went flat on the 11th lap.

After pitting seven more times during the race, the older brother of Al finally dropped out of the race on the 77th lap with a broken gear shift lever.

Bettenhausen, who was Roger Penske's lone entry in the race after Donohue was injured practicing for a road race, had little trouble holding the lead. But on the 77th lap the Offy Eagle slowed down on the back stretch and was forced out of the race with ignition failure. Andretti, who has not won a 500-mile race since taking Indianapolis in 1969, charged into the lead from the second place spot he had been holding since the 52nd lap.

His Viceroy Special was running nearly perfectly and the "hometown" favorite opened a sizeable lead over Leonard and Rutherford. He took a 29.9 second pit stop on the 120th lap when the engine cut out in the pits and Leonard closed the gap to four seconds.

But Andretti held on to the lead and stretched it to nearly 11 seconds before back luck hit him with less than 100 miles left on the cool, clear afternoon. He pitted on the 163rd lap, but could not get the car in gear to go back out and ended up sitting there for about 10 minutes before the trouble could be cleared up.

Leonard then took over the lead and held it for the remainder of the race.

The race was relatively safe, with the yellow going out only five times. There were three accidents with Caruthers' being the most serious.

He suffered burns on the left hand, a broken leg and foot and cuts and bruises on both legs. He was released from the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg, Sunday morning.

He is to fly to California to be readmitted to a hospital.

He suffered first and second degree burns of the lower left arm and multiple bruises. He was treated at the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg.

Lloyd Ruby spun out into the infield on the 37th lap and Sammy Sessions and Wally Dallenbach tangled in the number two turn on the 120th lap. None of the three drivers were injured.

Attrition was high in the race. Only 17 cars were running at the midway point and only eight were still on the track at the end.

Joe Leonard is all smiles Saturday as he holds trophy after winning second annual Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway with record speed of 154.781 miles per hour.

Leonard really too rich; fuel mixture frustrating

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — It's no good to be too rich!

Nobody knows that better than Schaefer 500 winner Joe Leonard, whose fuel mixture caused him concern during the entire distance of Saturday's race.

"We ran too rich," said the likeable Californian. "The engine kept popping all day. The fuel mixture was just too rich."

Currently leading the USAC national points Championship, Leonard explained that with the forecast of hot weather, the mixture was used to give him some extra speed.

"I thought I could get in the lead at the start of the race," he continued, "but I never did get the potential."

Leonard, whose most recent victory was the Michigan 200, said the cars of his teammates, Al Unser and Mario Andretti, were performing very well and he added that Unser was outrunning him during the latter part of the race.

"We had some trouble with the chassis earlier this season," said the rugged looking member of the Parnelli Jones' "Super Team." "But we have a number one crew and we have tested extensively."

"You have to find out what makes a car tick to finish a race first," added the 37-year-old speedster.

In comments released this week, George Bignotti, master mechanic of the Viceroy Team, indicated that Leonard's car contained increased horsepower, improved reliability and a better chassis for the Schaefer 500.

For Leonard, his Samsonite Special and Offenhausen engine couldn't have been more reliable. He could not say the same about some of the rookie drivers, however.

"One fellow was giving me a fit, but I'm going to talk to him later," said Joe, who also believes in astrology. "Sometimes the new fellows get tired or they're not alert during the last part of the race. You have to dive under them and this is hazardous. It just takes time and experience to learn this, though."

When the yellow flag came out at various times throughout the race, Leonard took his place behind the pace car along with the other drivers.

Leonard said he preferred the pace car coming out on the track to the caution light system that is used at Indianapolis.

"I feel the pace car is better because if your race car is running to perfection, there is no doubt that you can take off again," said the four-time American Motorcycle Assn. champion. "This pace car is the most bullet proof situation. I don't know why it isn't used everywhere."

Most Schaefer 500 drivers had trouble with debris at the Pocono tri-oval on Saturday and Leonard was no exception.

"A piece of debris cut my tire," he said, and I had to make an extra pit stop. My radio wasn't working and I was lucky that another driver pointed to my tire."

Conceding that the race would have been more competitive if Mark Donohue and A.J. Foyt were in the running, Leonard, whose first 500 mile victory was at Ontario in 1971, said that it was a pleasure to race against a teammate like Al Unser.

Since Leonard finished second at the Schaefer 500 last year, it was suggested that Pocono might be his favorite track.

"This is a real demanding track," he said. "I feel more fatigued now than I did at Indy. But, this is a real driver's track. That's why I like it so much."

Victory in Schaefer 500 increases lead in points

LONG POND — Not only did Joe Leonard win his second 500-mile race within a year Saturday when he took the Schaefer 500, but he firmly established himself on the road to his second consecutive national championship.

Leonard, who won last year's California 500 at Ontario, picked up 1,000 points in the United States Auto Club championship division standings.

The San Jose, Calif., grandfather now has 2,640 points and a 1,020 point lead over Al Unser, who won two national titles, won 500 points by finishing third Saturday.

Mark Donohue, the 1971 Schaefer 500 champion, who is sidelined after knee surgery, is in third place with 1,240 points. Mario Andretti, another former national champion, holds down fourth place after his seventh place finish Saturday. The Nazareth driver has 885 points.

In fifth place is rookie Mike Hiss, who finished sixth in this year's race. He had 865 points. Sammy Sessions, who was elected to drive A.J. Foyt's car after the Texan was injured earlier this year, is in sixth place with 840 points. Billy Vukovich, son of the former Indianapolis 500 winner, is in seventh place with 820 points.

Johnny Rutherford, who finished about 25 seconds behind Leonard Saturday, is in eighth place with 800 points. Gary Bettenhausen, Donohue's teammate on the Roger Penske team, is in ninth place with 790 points.

Roger McCluskey, who took the pole for Sunday's Pennsylvania 500 for late model stock cars, rounds out the top 10 with 660 points.

Schaefer 500 takes toll; only eight running at end

LONG POND — Saturday's running of the Schaefer 500 took its heaviest toll on machinery in the two years it has been run.

Only eight cars were running when national defending champion Joe Leonard took the victory and the winner's share of the nearly $400,000 in prize money.

It took Greg Weld just one lap before his car was forced out with a vibration in the engine. Three laps later Grant King's other entry, driven by Steve Krisloff, blew its block.

Before eight laps had been completed, Peter Revson and Carl Williams had dropped out. Revson's Gulf McLaren broke a rod bolt and Williams' burned a piston in his City of Terre Haute Special.

Jerry Karl and Bob Harkey were then forced out with a split fuel tank and a broken hose. John Mahler's car broke a connecting rod on the 34th lap. Lloyd Ruby, the hard luck Texan, was involved in a spin on the 34th lap.

Next to drop out were Denny Zimmerman with a broken throttle, Bill Simpson with a broken connecting rod, Swede

Yellow report

LONG POND — Here is the yellow flag report on Saturday's running of the second annual Schaefer 500:

Laps 36 to 43 — Lloyd Ruby spun into infield in third straightaway.

Laps 75 to 83 — John Mahler, in relief of Denny Zimmerman, stalled on backstretch.

Laps 98 to 99 — Oil in first turn.

Laps 120 to 129 — Sammy Sessions and Wally Dallenbach involved in accident in second turn.

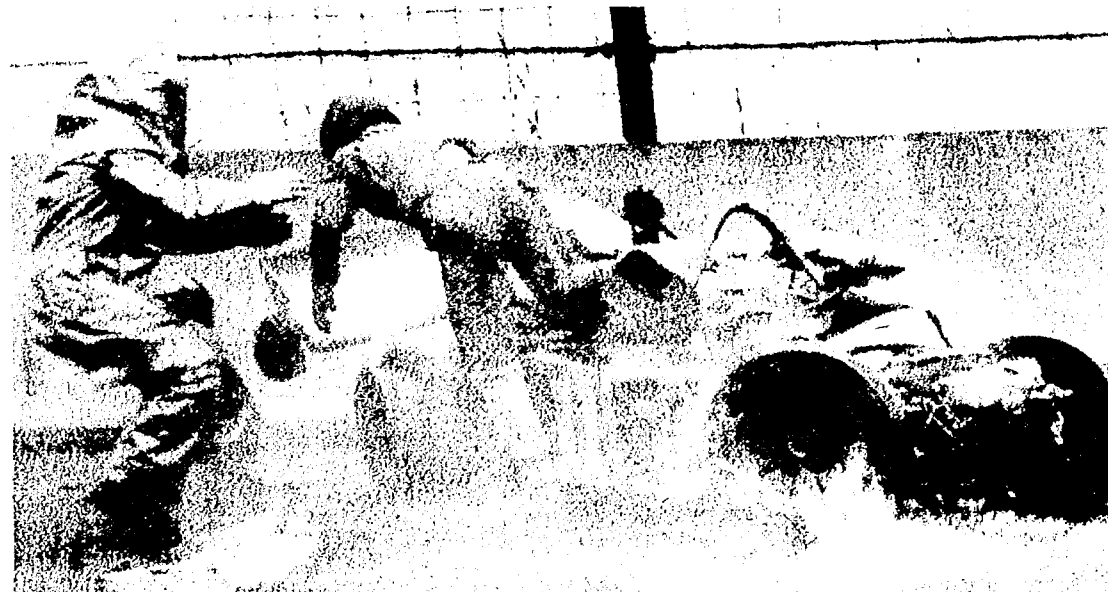

Laps 160 to 181 — Jimmy Caruthers involved in accident in third turn.

Savage with a gear box failure, Gordon Johncock with a broken connecting rod and George Snider with a dropped valve.

Then bad luck struck the pre-race favorites. Pole winner Bobby Unser's Olsonite Eagle was forced out on the 77th lap with a broken gear shift lever and Gary Bettenhausen, who had led for nearly 70 laps, was eliminated with ignition failure.

Then came Bentley Warren with an oil leak, John Martin with turbocharger failure and Sammy Sessions after an accident. Dick Simon was forced out when his rear end locked on the 131st lap and Wally Dallenbach followed with a broken rear end.

Mel Kenyon's car broke its pinion gear, Roger McCluskey went out with a broken hose and Rick Muther followed when his car began overheating. Jimmy Caruthers went out on the 160th lap when he hit the wall.

Jimmy Caruthers, Anaheim, Calif., climbs from burning car after it crashed in third turn during 173rd lap of Schaefer 500. Caruthers suffered burns and bruises.

Posey wins rookie award

LONG POND — Sam Posey, Sharon, Conn., was awarded the "Mario Andretti rookie of the year" award for his fifth place finish in Saturday's Schaefer 500.

Posey, who completed 198 of the 200 laps, was named the winner of the award presented by the Nazareth Jaycees after being elected by sportswriters.

Leonard wins in confusing Schaefer 500

By CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — Nearly all of the 70,000 persons at Pocono International Raceway Saturday knew who won the second running of the Schaefer 500.

But it took the United States Auto Club nearly one hour to declare Joe Leonard the winner.

Leonard, fresh off a victory in the Michigan 200, took the lead on the 164th lap from Mario Andretti of Nazareth and roared his Parnelli Offy to a record speed of 154.781 miles per hour.

Mark Donohue had set the standard last year when he won with an average of 138.649.

Al Unser, who had started with Leonard in the second row of the race, was given the checkered flag and the crowd had to wait until USAC timers and scorers studied their tapes and gave the win to Leonard.

The confusion occurred when Unser, driving another Parnelli Offy, passed

Johnny Rutherford on the 173rd lap under the yellow flag. The yellow came out when Jimmy Caruthers, Anaheim, Calif., hit the wall coming out of the third turn.

With leader Leonard in the pits and Rutherford the first car in line behind the pace car on the track, USAC became confused and had Unser leading the rest of the race. But on the 172nd lap, Unser was running in third place seven seconds behind Rutherford.

Suddenly USAC had him a four-second leader a lap later. The Parnelli Jones team also had Leonard winning the race. Unofficially, Unser would have had to make up 4:18.4 he lost in pit stop time to Leonard.

For passing under the yellow, Dick King, competition director for USAC, penalized Unser one lap and placed him third behind Leonard and Rutherford.

"It was a clear track," Leonard said after taking the winner's share of the nearly $400,000 purse. "The track was surprisingly good for the entire race."

With Bobby Unser sitting on the pole after setting a record qualifying speed of 189.473, Andretti, the third member of the "Super Team," took the lead on the green flag. But after that it was anybody's race with the lead changing seven more times before Gary Bettenhausen, Donohue's teammate in his Sunoco Special, settled down to become the rabbit on the ninth lap.

Bobby Unser, who had sat on the pole for the eighth straight time, got a taste of the bad luck which was to hit his Olsonite Eagle when the left rear tire went flat on the 11th lap.

After pitting seven more times during the race, the older brother of Al finally dropped out of the race on the 77th lap with a broken gear shift lever.

Bettenhausen, who was Roger Penske's lone entry in the race after Donohue was injured practicing for a road race, had little trouble holding the lead. But on the 77th lap the Offy Eagle slowed down on the back stretch and was forced out of the race with ignition failure.

Andretti, who has not won a 500-mile race since taking Indianapolis in 1969, charged into the lead from the second place spot he had been holding since the 52nd lap.

His Viceroy Special was running nearly perfectly and the "hometown" favorite opened a sizeable lead over Leonard and Rutherford. He took a 29.9 second pit stop on the 120th lap when the engine cut out in the pits and Leonard closed the gap to four seconds.

But Andretti held on to the lead and stretched it to nearly 11 seconds before back luck hit him with less than 100 miles left on the cool, clear afternoon. He pitted on the 163rd lap, but could not get the car in gear to go back out and ended up sitting there for about 10 minutes before the trouble could be cleared up.

Leonard then took over the lead and held it for the remainder of the race.

The race was relatively safe, with the yellow going out only five times. There were three accidents with Caruthers' being the most serious.

He suffered burns on the left hand, a broken leg and foot and cuts and bruises on both legs. He was released from the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg, Sunday morning.

He is to fly to California to be readmitted to a hospital.

He suffered first and second degree burns of the lower left arm and multiple bruises. He was treated at the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg.

Lloyd Ruby spun out into the infield on the 37th lap and Sammy Sessions and Wally Dallenbach tangled in the number two turn on the 120th lap. None of the three drivers were injured.

Attrition was high in the race. Only 17 cars were running at the midway point and only eight were still on the track at the end.

Leonard really too rich; fuel mixture frustrating

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — It's no good to be too rich!

Nobody knows that better than Schaefer 500 winner Joe Leonard, whose fuel mixture caused him concern during the entire distance of Saturday's race.

"We ran too rich," said the likeable Californian. "The engine kept popping all day. The fuel mixture was just too rich."

Currently leading the USAC national points Championship, Leonard explained that with the forecast of hot weather, the mixture was used to give him some extra speed.

"I thought I could get in the lead at the start of the race," he continued, "but I never did get the potential."

Leonard, whose most recent victory was the Michigan 200, said the cars of his teammates, Al Unser and Mario Andretti, were performing very well and he added that Unser was outrunning him during the latter part of the race.

"We had some trouble with the chassis earlier this season," said the rugged looking member of the Parnelli Jones "Super Team". "But we have a number one crew and we have tested extensively."

"You have to find out what makes a car tick to finish a race first," added the 37-year-old speedster.

In comments released this week, George Bignotti, master mechanic of the Viceroy Team, indicated that Leonard's car contained increased horsepower, improved reliability and a better chassis for the Schaefer 500.

For Leonard, his Samsonite Special and Offenhausen engine couldn't have been more reliable. He could not say the same about some of the rookie drivers, however.

"One fellow was giving me a fit, but I'm going to talk to him later," said Joe, who also believes in astrology. "Sometimes the new fellows get tired or they're not alert during the last part of the race. You have to dive under them and this is hazardous. It just takes time and experience to learn this, though."

When the yellow flag came out at various times throughout the race, Leonard took his place behind the pace car along with the other drivers.

Leonard said he preferred the pace car coming out on the track to the caution light system that is used at Indianapolis.

"I feel the pace car is better because if your race car is running to perfection, there is no doubt that you can take off again," said the four-time American Motorcycle Assn. champion. "This pace car is the most bullet proof situation. I don't know why it isn't used everywhere."

Most Schaefer 500 drivers had trouble with debris at the Pocono tri-oval on Saturday and Leonard was no exception.

"A piece of debris cut my tire," he said, and I had to make an extra pit stop. My radio wasn't working and I was lucky that another driver pointed to my tire."

Conceding that the race would have been more competitive if Mark Donohue and A.J. Foyt were in the running, Leonard, whose first 500 mile victory was at Ontario in 1971, said that it was a pleasure to race against a teammate like Al Unser.

Since Leonard finished second at the Schaefer 500 last year, it was suggested that Pocono might be his favorite track.

Victory in Schaefer 500 increases lead in points

LONG POND — Not only did Joe Leonard win his second 500-mile race within a year Saturday when he took the Schaefer 500, but he firmly established himself on the road to his second consecutive national championship.

Leonard, who won last year's California 500 at Ontario, picked up 1,000 points in the United States Auto Club championship division standings.

The San Jose, Calif., grandfather now has 2,640 points and a 1,020 point lead over Al Unser. Unser, who won two national titles, won 500 points by finishing third Saturday.

Mark Donohue, the 1971 Schaefer 500 champion, was sidelined after knee surgery, is in third place with 1,240 points. Mario Andretti, another former national champion, holds down fourth place after his seventh place finish Saturday. The Nazareth driver has 885 points.

In fifth place is rookie Mike Hiss, who finished sixth in this year's race. He had 865 points. Sammy Sessions, who was elected to drive A.J. Foyt's car after the Texan was injured earlier this year, is in sixth place with 840 points. Billy Vukovich, son of the former Indianapolis 500 winner, is in seventh place with 820 points.

Johnny Rutherford, who finished about 25 seconds behind Leonard Saturday, is in eighth place with 800 points. Gary Bettenhausen, Donohue's teammate on the Roger Penske team, is in ninth place with 790 points.

Roger McCluskey, who took the pole for Sunday's Pennsylvania 500 for late model stock cars, rounds out the top 10 with 650 points.

Schaefer 500 takes toll; only eight running at end

LONG POND — Saturday's running of the Schaefer 500 took its heaviest toll on machinery in the two years it has been run.

Only eight cars were running when national defending champion Joe Leonard took the victory and the winner's share of the nearly $400,000 in prize money.

It took Greg Weld just one lap before his car was forced out with a vibration in the engine. Three laps later Grant King's other entry, driven by Steve Krisloff, blew its block.

Before eight laps had been completed, Peter Revson and Carl Williams had dropped out. Revson's Gulf McLaren broke a rod bolt and Williams' burned a piston in his City of Terre Haute Special.

Jerry Karl and Bob Harkey were then forced out with a split fuel tank and a broken hose. John Mahler's car broke a connecting rod on the 34th lap. Lloyd Ruby, the hard luck Texan, was involved in a spin on the 34th lap.

Next to drop out were Denny Zimmerman with a broken throttle, Bill Simpson with a broken connecting rod, Swede

Savage with a gear box failure, Gordon Johncock with a broken connecting rod and George Snider with a dropped valve.

Then bad luck struck the pre-race favorites. Pole winner Bobby Unser's Olsonite Eagle was forced out on the 77th lap with a broken gear shift lever and Gary Bettenhausen, who had led for nearly 70 laps, was eliminated with ignition failure.

Then came Bentley Warren with an oil leak, John Martin with turbocharger failure and Sammy Sessions after an accident. Dick Simon was forced out when his rear end locked on the 131st lap and Wally Dallenbach followed with a broken rear end.

Mel Kenyon's car broke its pinion gear, Roger McCluskey went out with a broken hose and Rick Muther followed when his car began overheating. Jimmy Caruthers went out on the 160th lap when he hit the wall.

Yellow report

LONG POND — Here is the yellow flag report on Saturday's running of the second annual Schaefer 500:

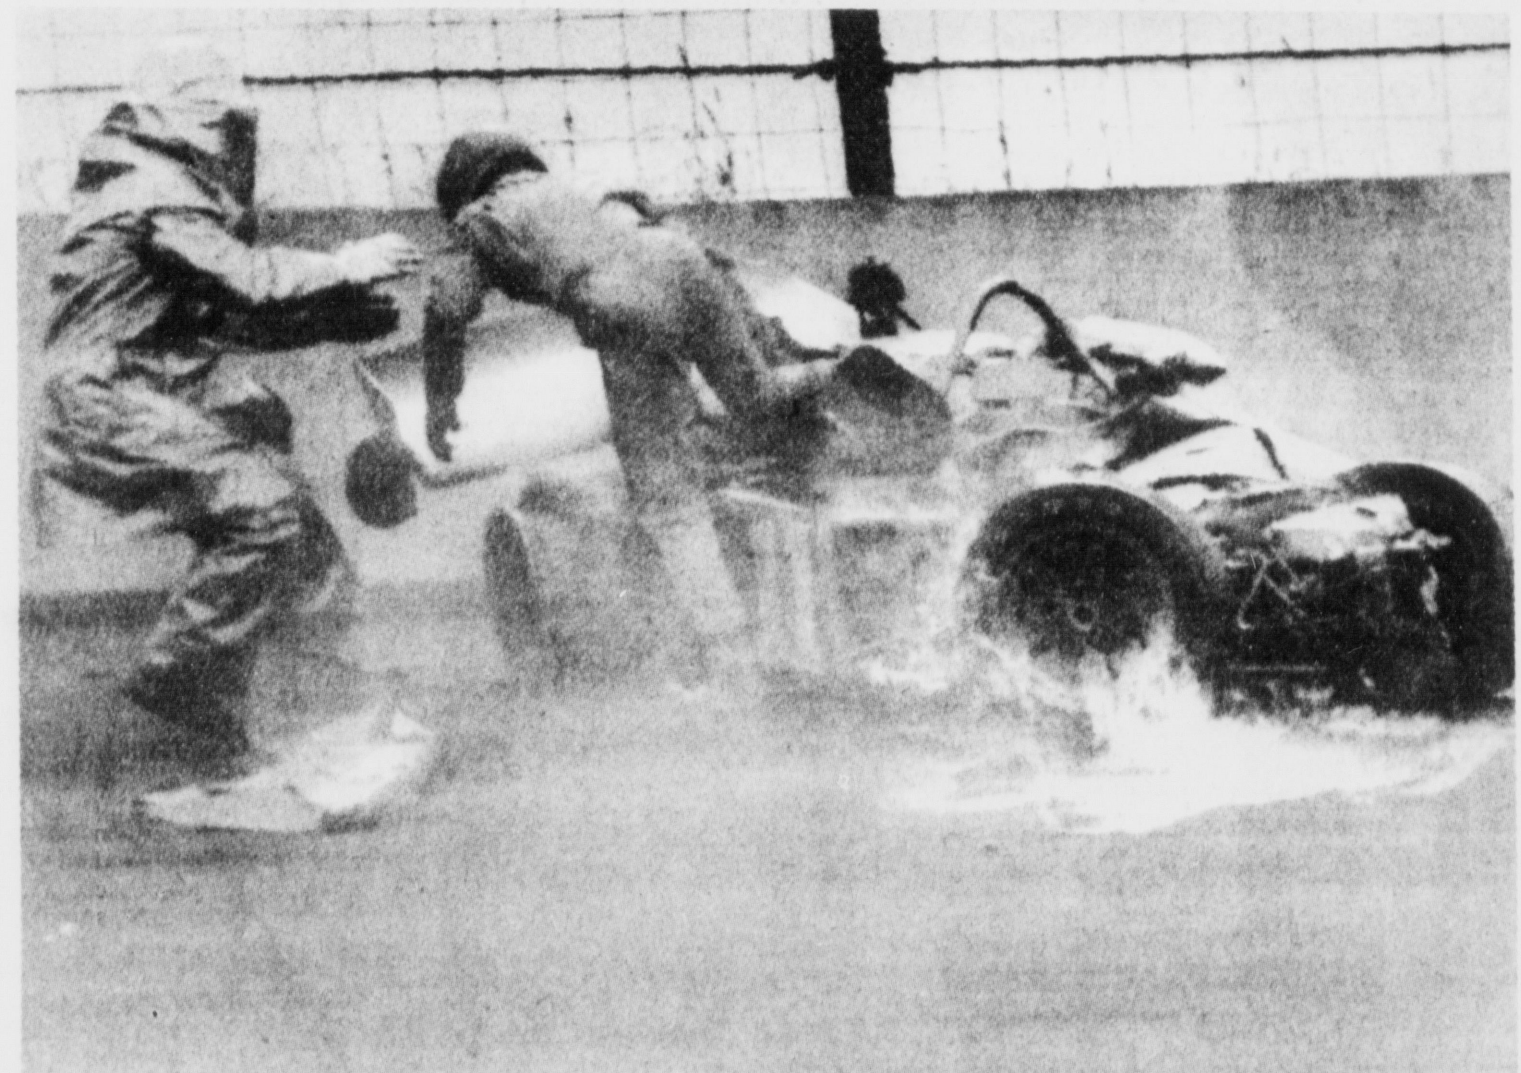

Laps 36 to 43 — Lloyd Ruby spun into infield in third straightaway.

Laps 75 to 83 — John Mahler, in relief of Denny Zimmerman, stalled on backstretch.

Laps 98 to 99 — Oil in first turn.

Laps 120 to 129 — Sammy Sessions and Wally Dallenbach involved in accident in second turn.

Laps 160 to 181 — Jimmy Caruthers involved in accident in third turn.

Jimmy Caruthers, Anaheim, Calif., climbs from burning car after it crashed in third turn during 173rd lap of Schaefer 500. Caruthers suffered burns and bruises.

McCluskey coasts in Pennsylvania 500

BY CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — Roger McCluskey finally accomplished what he started out to do nearly one year ago.

The Tucson, Ariz., driver, who finished 11th in Saturday's Schaefer 500 championship race, took the lead early in the race Sunday and coasted to an easy victory in the second annual Pennsylvania 500 at Pocono International Raceway.

McCluskey, who collected $10,000 in purse money for his victory, guided his 1970 Plymouth Superbird to a record time of 127.035 miles per hour. He picked up 1,000 points, but has not clinched this year's title.

Last year McCluskey needed only a victory in the Pennsylvania 500 to wrap up his third straight United States Auto Club late model stock car championship. But his car hit the wall on the 173rd lap of the 200-mile race and he lost the decision and the point championship to Butch Hartman.

Sunday's pre-race duel between the top USAC drivers and NASCAR darling Richard Petty lasted only 256 miles. Petty, the lone million dollar winner in auto racing, dogged McCluskey, Hartman, Wally Dallenbach and Ramon Stott most of the early going.

He finally was eliminated from the race on the 102nd lap when his 1972 Plymouth blew a left tire and the car's oil line ruptured.

With Petty out, the race settled down to an apparent duel between McCluskey, who sat on the pole with a qualifying speed of 148.177 miles per hour and Hartman, who went into the race third in the point standings behind McCluskey. But Hartman dropped out of contention on the 130th lap when he pitted and his crew took 3:06.6 to change the entire distributor.

From there on it was a one-man show.

Al Unser, who was prematurely declared the winner of the Schaefer 500 before a mass of confusion was finally cleared up, dropped out of Sunday's race after completing 40 laps with clutch failure.

McCluskey, who won another $7,120 in Saturday's race, lost the lead only when he was in the pits. But while he was on the track there was no stopping him.

At various points he had lapped the entire field except for Hartman, who ended up second — a final victim of lapping — and his interval between his closest challenger nearly three minutes. He ended four laps down.

Dave Marcis, another of the NASCAR drivers who made an appearance in the USAC-sanctioned race, stayed in contention for awhile. But his 1972 Matador was experiencing carburetor trouble and he soon fell behind.

Whether he finished in the top running was elementary, since he was bound to be a victim of penalties. While the pace car was out during yellow flag time, the Skyland, N.C. driver continuously passed slower cars on the track.

Under USAC rules, cars must fall in line behind the pace car on the yellow flag. But under NASCAR rules, with which Marcis is used to dealing with, a driver is allowed to pass slower cars under the yellow. He was finally dropped from fourth to fifth place in the standings.

The attrition rate, like Saturday's race, took its toll on the drivers. The main thing which the cars went through like peanuts was tires. This was probably due to the fact that the stock cars were not using tires prepared for the sometimes rough Pocono International Raceway surface.

Sunday's "hometown favorite," Al Loquasto of Easton, lasted only 75 laps when his 1972 Dodge Charger — a teammate to Hartman, blew an engine.

Winner adds wings and victory

BY MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — Give a bird a new wing and it can do just about anything.

At least for Pennsylvania 500 winner Roger McCluskey the saying holds true. The wing on his 1970 Superbird may have been just the thing to put him in the winner's circle for Sunday's 500-mile stock car race.

Essentially McCluskey's car is the same one he has been running since 1969. The big difference is the Superbird body that was added to his Roadrunner in 1970.

Even before the race began, McCluskey predicted that his Superbird would be faster than the unwinged type car that Richard Petty drives.

The prediction held true. McCluskey took command of the race on the very first lap and nobody else could catch him. He led a total of 183 laps.

"I came here to race today," said the 41-year old Arizonian, who snarled his third stock car championship race this month. "It was pretty tough for a while, but then I got away from those other drivers," he said referring to Richard Petty, Butch Hartman, Wally Dallenbach and Ramon Stott, who were in hot pursuit during the early part of the race.

"My car handled better flat out than when I tried to slow down at the end of the race," he added. "To be honest, I couldn't run comfortable if I ran slower, because the chassis was set-up to run fast." Through turn one they gained on me, but I picked up on them in two and three."

Although he was forced to drop out of the race because of a blown tire and ruptured oil line after lap 102, Richard Petty gave the 1969 and 1970 stock car division champion some tough competition during the first half of the race.

"When Petty was out, I knew I could run a little easier," said McCluskey, who finished third in the USAC stock car championship last year after a blown tire forced him into the wall at the 1971 Pennsylvania 500. "Petty is tough. He keeps you awake. I figured we'd have a good marriage all day."

Although commenting that this was one of the longest stock car races he has won, McCluskey said he wasn't as tired as when he won the 250-mile race at Indianapolis Raceway Park last week. He also added that Milwaukee — he won the 200-mile race there on July 9 — was his favorite track.

Narrowly squeezing through a multicar pile up on turn three during the first lap, McCluskey described the tie-up as "a real mess." Other than his car pushing a bit and a blistered rear tire, the 5-10", 190 pound driver said he experienced no difficulties with his car during the race.

"Tires were the one thing that bothered me," said the versatile veteran, who finished eleventh in the Schaefer 500. "With the two consecutive races, there was lots of oil and rubber on the track. This was a lot harder on the tires. It caused them to slip more."

Car owner Norm Nelson said the only adjustment made to the Superbird for Sunday's race was a little different front end setting to prevent a fire blowing on the car. as happened in the race last year.

Comparing the two 500-mile races held at the Pocono International Raceway this weekend, McCluskey said it "didn't make any difference" to him if he drove a championship car or a stock car, or if the stock car race was held before the Schaefer 500.

He did suggest that the extra lap time he got in for Saturday's race was a help on Sunday.

"I'm sure that helped," he said, "although I don't know to what degree. If I was just running the stock car, and not the championship race, I would have had to run more practice laps with the Superbird. It definitely helped."

McCluskey, who is now leading in the USAC stock car championship with a total of 2,430 points, added that the Superbird is strictly for super speedways and is only run on one mile or larger paved tracks.

"We're going to miss that wing next year," he said. "I'm sure we will. I don't know what we'll run, but I'm sure it won't have a wing."

Pennsylvania 500 yellow flag report

LONG POND — Here are the causes for the yellow flags in Sunday's Pennsylvania 500:

Laps 1 through 6: Accident on third straightaway involving Dick Beinhlich, Paul Sizemore, Ken Reiter, H.L. Wilson, Steve Arndt and Leroy Austin.

Laps 32 through 36: Harold Fair spun and hit wall on first turn.

Laps 104 to 110: Richard Petty blew engine.

Laps 119 to 123: Ramon Stott and Joe Booher involved in accident on second turn.

Laps 141 to 144: Jim Hurtubise spun in first turn.

Laps 153 to 154: Tailpipe found in first turn.

Richard Petty is relaxed before the start of the Pennsylvania 500. But NASCAR's all-time leading money winner lasted only 102 laps in the race and finished 22nd.

Petty show in USAC race for birds

LONG POND — For Richard Petty, the Pennsylvania 500 stock car race was for the birds!

Try as he might, his 1972 STP Plymouth could not catch up to Roger McCluskey's winged 1970 Superbird, which commandeered the entire race.

Starting on the outside of the second row in fourth position, Petty's sanitary iridescent red and bright blue car, led the race only 13 of the total 200 laps that were run at the two and a half mile tri-oval. Even his legendary, superstar crew, couldn't give him that extra edge to nose out McCluskey.

The crushing blow came during Petty's 102nd lap when a blown tire ruptured his oil line and forced him out of the race for good.

"I was having tire difficulty during the entire race," said the likeable Southerner, who has amassed 143 wins and more than a million dollars in prize money during his career.

"I came in for my first pit stop and changed all four tires," added the three-time Grand National Champion who usually drips exclusively on the NASCAR circuit. "One of them was off balance, but I couldn't figure out which one, so two laps later I had to change all four tires again."

Ironically, the same man said before the race that he didn't expect to have any tire problems at all.

Commenting after the race about the difficulties he encountered, Richard Petty didn't utter any of his typical, "Do you know what I mean?" and he didn't refer to any other "cats" that were driving on the track.

Although he outwardly seemed to be in pleasant spirits, his disappointment at not being able to finish his premiere race at Pocono was obvious. He even admitted that he was outrun.

"With the nose and wing, he (referring to McCluskey) was outrunning me all day."

Although McCluskey had predicted before the race began that the Superbird would be faster than Petty's unwinged car, the North Carolina driver didn't seem to feel the other cars had any extra advantage.

Since winged cars are not allowed to compete on the NASCAR circuit, however, Petty has probably never had to contend with the problem before.

One of the 24 drivers who didn't finish the Pennsylvania 500, Petty will receive $825 in purse money for his showing on Sunday.

Even though he never got in his full 500 miles of lap time at the Pocono oval, Petty was quick to comment that the track was "real nice" and he said it was great for stock cars.

Before the race, Petty, who has competed in more than 555 races in his lifetime, said that the Pennsylvania 500 was a whole new ball game and that he would have to watch the "big boys" to learn the race track.

At the time he listed McCluskey as one of the toughest competitors, but Petty probably never figured that the Superbird would be leading the field almost the entire day, or that he would not be able to drive his car into the winner's circle.

Winner's share $83,530 for Schaefer win

LONG POND — Joe Leonard can stop by the paymaster's window at any time and pick up the $83,530 he collected for winning Saturday's Schaefer 500.

Leonard took the winner's share of the $361,300 prize money in a record speed of 154.781 miles per hour.

Besides the prize money, the San Jose, Calif., grandfather won the pace car, a ring and the Schaefer trophy. Leonard's mechanic was given a tool kit valued at $1,972.00.

Johnny Rutherford, who finished second in the race, won $44,380. Al Unser, who was given the checkered flag amid mass confusion by United States Auto Club timers and scorers but was later dropped to third place after being penalized one lap for passing under the yellow, won $26,845.

Fourth place finisher Billy Vukovich collected $17,403. Sam Posey, who was named winner of the "Mario Andretti rookie of the year" award, won $12,810. Andretti, who was leading a considerable portion of the race before experiencing mechanical difficulty, was the last driver to collect more than $10,000. The Nazareth driver won $11,882.

Pole sitter Bobby Unser, who dropped out of the race after 77 laps with a broken gear shift lever, won $5,891 in prize money and $1,000 for taking the pole at a record 189.473 miles per hour plus a host of merchandise. His mechanic also received a tool kit valued at $1,972.

Gordon Johncock, the 22nd place finisher, turned in the fastest lap of the race at 184.079 was presented a trophy.

LONG POND — Roger McCluskey finally accomplished what he started out to do nearly one year ago.

The Tucson, Ariz., driver, who finished 11th in Saturday's Schaefer 500 championship race, took the lead early in the race Sunday and coasted to an easy victory in the second annual Pennsylvania 500 at Pocono International Raceway.

McCluskey, who collected $10,000 in purse money for his victory, guided his 1970 Plymouth Superbird to a record time of 127.035 miles per hour. He picked up 1,000 points, but has not clinched this year's title.

Last year McCluskey needed only a victory in the Pennsylvania 500 to wrap up his third straight United States Auto Club late model stock car championship. But his car hit the wall on the 173rd lap of the 200-mile race and he lost the decision and the point championship to Butch Hartman.

Sunday's pre-race duel between the top USAC drivers and NASCAR darling Richard Petty lasted only 256 miles. Petty, the lone million dollar winner in auto racing, dogged McCluskey, Hartman, Wally Dallenbach and Ramo Stott most of the early going.

He finally was eliminated from the race on the 102nd lap when his 1972 Plymouth blew a left tire and the car's oil line ruptured.

With Petty out, the race settled down to an apparent duel between McCluskey, who sat on the pole with a qualifying speed of 148.177 miles per hour and Hartman, who went into the race third in the point standings behind McCluskey.

But Hartman dropped out of contention on the 130th lap when he pitted and his crew took 3:06.6 to change the entire distributor.

From there on it was a one-man show.

Five cars were eliminated from the starting field of 40 right off the bat when Steve Arndt spun in the third straightaway. He was out of the race along with Dick Beinhich, Paul Sizemore, Ken Reiter, H.L. Wilson and Leroy Austin.

Al Unser, who was prematurely declared the winner of the Schaefer 500 before a mass of confusion was finally cleared up, dropped out of Sunday's race after completing 40 laps with clutch failure.

McCluskey, who won another $7,120 in Saturday's race, lost the lead only when he was in the pits. But while he was on the track there was no stopping him.

At various points he had lapped the entire field except for Hartman, who ended up second — a final victim of lapping — and his interval between his closest challenger nearly three minutes. He ended four laps down.

Dave Marcis, another of the NASCAR drivers who made an appearance in the USAC-sanctioned race, stayed in contention for awhile. But his 1972 Matador was experiencing carburetor trouble and he soon fell behind.

Whether he finished in the top running was elementary, since he was bound to be a victim of penalties. While the pace car was out during yellow flag time, the Skyland, N.C. driver continuously passed slower cars on the track.

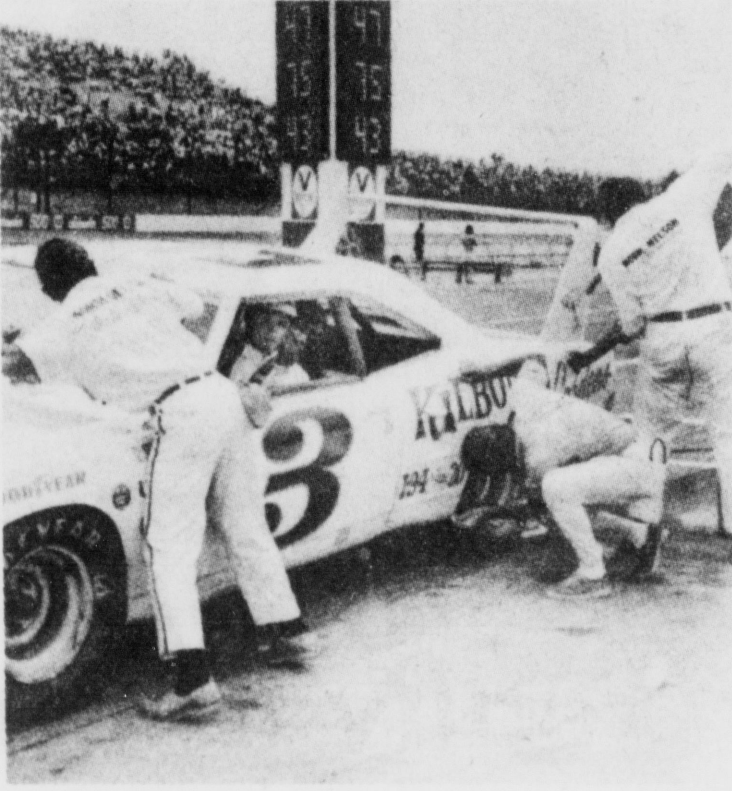

Under USAC rules, cars must fall in line behind the pace car on the yellow flag. But under NASCAR rules, with which Marcis is used to dealing with, a driver is allowed to pass slower cars under the yellow. He was finally dropped from fourth to fifth place in the standings.

The attrition rate, like Saturday's race, took its toll on the drivers. The main thing which the cars went through like peanuts was tires. This was probably due to the fact that the stock cars were not using tires prepared for the sometimes rough Pocono International Raceway surface.

There were only 17 cars running at the end.

Sunday's "hometown favorite," Al Loquasto of Easton, lasted only 75 laps when his 1972 Dodge Charger — a teammate to Hartman, blew an engine.

Roger McCluskey gets fuel and careful check of his 1970 Superbird during pit stop Sunday. The Tucson, Ariz., driver had little trouble winning the Pennsylvania 500.

Pennsylvania 500 yellow flag report

LONG POND — Here are the causes for the yellow flags in Sunday's Pennsylvania 500:

- Laps 1 through 6: Accident on third straightaway involving Dick Beinhich, Paul Sizemore, Ken Reiter, H.L. Wilson, Steve Arndt and Leroy Austin.
- Laps 32 through 36: Harold Fair spun and hit wall on first turn.
- Laps 79 to 89: Al Loquasto blew engine on main straightaway and spilled oil through first turn.
- Laps 104 to 110: Richard Petty blew engine.
- Laps 119 to 123: Ramon Stott and Joe Booher involved in accident on second turn.
- Laps 141 to 144: Jim Hurtubise spun in first turn.
- Laps 153 to 154: Tailpipe found in first turn.
- Laps 185 to 188: Jigger Sirois blew engine in third turn.

Richard Petty is relaxed before the start of the Pennsylvania 500. But NASCAR's all-time leading money winner lasted only 102 laps in the race and finished 22nd.

Winner adds wings and victory

BY MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — Give a bird a new wing and it can do just about anything.

At least for Pennsylvania 500 winner Roger McCluskey the saying holds true. The wing on his 1970 Superbird may have been just the thing to put him in the winner's circle for Sunday's 500-mile stock car race.

Essentially McCluskey's car is the same one he has been running since 1969. The big difference is the Superbird body that was added to his Roadrunner in 1970.

Even before the race began, McCluskey predicted that his Superbird would be faster than the unwinged type car that Richard Petty drives.

The prediction held true. McCluskey took command of the race on the very first lap and nobody else could catch him. He led a total of 183 laps.

"I came here to race today," said the 41-year old Arizonian, who snared his third stock car championship race this month. "It was pretty tough for a while, but then I got away from those other drivers," he said referring to Richard Petty, Butch Hartman, Walley Dallenbach and Ramo Stott, who were in hot pursuit during the early part of the race.

row) Mario Andretti (9), Gordon Johncock (24) and Al Unser leading the field.

Joe Leonard, center in sunglasses, is surrounded by well-wishers following completion of Saturday's 200 lap race. He was declared the winner when officials ruled Al Unser had been penalized one lap for passing while the field was under the yellow flag.

I think I won the race

Al Unser is surrounded by pretty faces following confusing conclusion of the Schaefer 500. Unser was wheeled into Victory Lane under presumption he had won the race, but he was later dropped to third place by race judges.

Technicians get Bobby Unser's Olsonite ready prior to start of Schaefer 500. Unser later had problems and was forced out of the race after only 78 laps following six pit stops.

It's all over

Pit workers feverishly attempt to get Mario Andretti back onto the track after his car stalled during pit stop on 163rd lap. Stop lasted 10 minutes before car could return to track, causing Andretti to drop from first place to a seventh-place finish.

Gary Bettenhausen's Sunoco Special awaits the beginning of Saturday's race. Bettenhausen led the race from 43rd to the 78th lap, when he was forced out of the race due to engine problems.

Lending a helping hand

Bobby Unser Jr. lends a hand in getting his father's Olsonite Eagle ready for Saturday's Schaefer 500.

Al's ready to go

Action there was aplenty at Pennsylvania 500

And they're off!

Roger McCluskey, of Tucson, Ariz., at right, leads a field of 40 cars into the first turn at the start of the Pennsylvania 500 stock car race. McCluskey overcame a number of challenges to take first place.

Pennsylvania 500 winner Roger McCluskey's 1970 Superbird is swarmed over, probed and fueled in last pit stop before going on to win the Pennsy trophy. (George Arnold photo)

Face of a loser

Dejected Ken Reiter of Louisville, Ky., sits amid a pile of tires, holding his own counsel with a cigarette and a can of root beer after his 1971 Ford was eliminated by an accident after one lap.

Ready for more

Crewmembers snake hoses away from the 1972 Charger of Butch Hartman as he makes pit stop during Pennsylvania 500. Hartman, of Zanesville, Ohio, was 1971 defending champion and at refueling point was four laps behind eventual winner Roger McCluskey.

Pardon my fender

Harold Fair of Detroit, Mich., bounces off the wall in the first turn in his 28th lap, badly damaging his 1971 Ford and ending the race for him. He finished 31st.

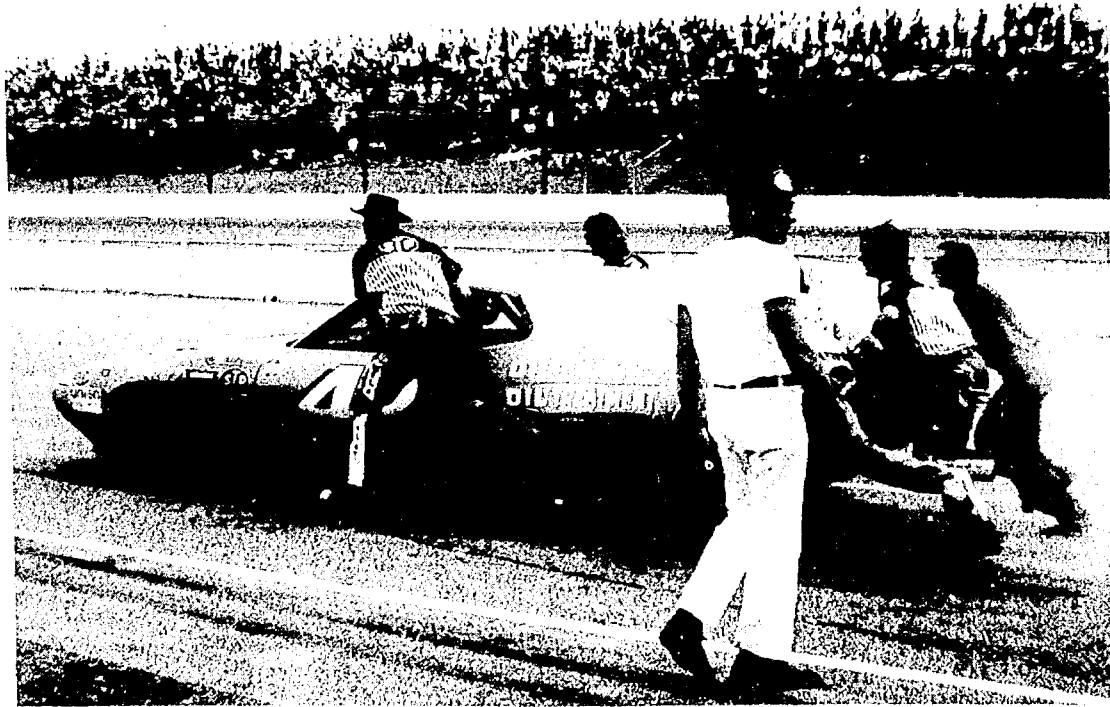

What's next?

Ann Landers

Likes 'real man'

Dear Ann Landers: I loved your definition of "a real man" — and I was glad to hear you say you are married to one. I am, too, and I'd like to tell you what I like best about my husband.

It's the way he gets down on the floor and plays with the kids, his big hands cradling their little heads as he helps them do somersaults. Or when he stays with the children for an evening so I can go someplace. And when I come home I see the clumsy but tender way he has put on the baby's diaper and his little undershirt, backwards.

I adore it when he comes into the kitchen and follows me around and talks to me while I'm putting the final touches on supper — telling me about his day, yakking a mile a minute and sharing a part of his life that I don't see.

I love the way he comes with me to PTA meetings even though there are only three or four other daddies there. I appreciate his kindness to my parents. He is generous, thoughtful and sweet to them.

Above all, Ann, he makes me feel like a real woman. And I guess that's what makes him a real man.

Big Jim's Wife

Dear Wife: It's a joy to receive a letter like yours in the midst of the thousands of gripes from women who are full of complaints — many justified, I'm sure. Thanks for the day-brightener. Jim sounds like a gem. And so do you.

Dear Ann Landers: If I'm a nut on the subject, so be it, but I get wild when I read such stories in the newspapers as these (they all appeared within the past month):

"Two-year-old falls off a balcony while watching a basketball game."

"Year-old tot tumbles out of grocery cart and is serious-

"Four-year-old drowns in bathtub."

"Toddler in serious condition after drinking cleaning fluid."

"Youngster found at bottom of pool. Two lifeguards on duty. No one says that the child was in trouble."

"Five-year-old dies after eating 40 pills found in grandmother's purse."

"Child of 18 months killed on road in front of aunt's home."

In every single instance, somebody was not doing his job. I know the heartache and agony that such accidents can cause parents, grandparents or whoever was supposed to be in charge — but it doesn't change things. Nothing is so important as keeping an eye on children.

What's a baby doing in a grocery cart, or at a basketball game, or out playing in the road? What are cleaning fluid and pills doing where a child can get his hands on them? Why is a youngster left in a locked car or in a bathtub?

Please, Ann, print this letter and let's hope and pray that every parent who reads it will ask himself, "Could any of these tragedies have occurred in MY family this past year?"

BELTED: (Q.) You are always siding with parents about spanking. Why do you? You must not know how humiliating it is to be spanked bare at my age, which is 16.

Last night a bunch of us boys went out on dates. I was supposed to get in at 11 but didn't make it till 12:30.

My mom was waiting for me with a belt. She made me take down both my pants and my underpants. Then she really belted me. The pain was bad, but the humiliation was awful.

Shamed in Arkansas

(A.) You are confused about my attitude toward teen-age spankings or beltings. I believe there are more effective ways to discipline teenagers and have repeatedly said so.

Your mother should not belt you. Particularly she should not belt you bare.

But you should not stay out needlessly late and cause her fear and anguish.

CAMP CLOUD: (Q.) I have an awful problem. I am going to camp with three friends. We were really looking forward to it. But last night this girl I know called and asked if she should put my name down to be in the cabin with her.

I didn't want to be mean, so I said, "Well, I guess so." The problem is that I don't like this girl. In fact, I dislike her intensely. What should I do?

Dreading Camp Now In Connecticut

(A.) There is not much you can do right now except hope that you don't end up the the same cabin with the girl. If you do try very hard to be friendly with her. Look for traits in her that you can like.

When she called, you should have been truthful. You have rediscovered an ageless truth: Lying does not pay.

If a flat ad was more than you could manage, you could have told her that you had already made plans for the camp.

POOR UNCLE: (Q.) My uncle has girl problems. They call him on the phone. Sure he likes girls, but he loses sleep talking to them. This 16-year-old girl named Kay is calling him. He asks her nicely to stop but she just keeps on. Once she asked him to marry her.

He asked me to write you and ask what he could do.

A Niece in Oklahoma (A.) I suspect your uncle is just having fun with you, or maybe pumping up his ego by boasting of his popularity.

If he is serious, he can get an unlisted telephone number and refuse to tell Kay what it is.

No girl who values her reputation should make a practice of calling boys. Maybe Kay, or some other girl like her will benefit from this.

SWEATER: (Q.) When I am on a date I sweat real badly. It's not that so much, but it really smells. You see my mother is from the Old Country and she raised me never to shave under my arms. None of the other girls has anything to do with me and I hardly ever get dates. What should I do?

16 in Florida

(A.) Deodorants and antiperspirants which you can buy at any drug or department store or supermarket, will take care of your dampness and odor. You should also take a good all-over bath daily.

To be more like other American girls, you should also have smooth underarms. Shaving is the answer there. If your mother forbids shaving, talk to her about how girls are today in America and how you are different from the others.

This may change her mind. If not, you can look forward to the time, very soon now, when you will be on your own and can make your own decisions about grooming and other matters.

Harris poll shows Agnew reaches highest job rating

By LOUIS HARRIS

Just before being named by President Nixon to be his running mate again, Vice President Spiro Agnew achieved his highest job rating in the Harris Survey since April of 1970, but he still remained with 45 per cent of the public inclined to view him positively and 47 per cent on the negative side.

Repeatedly, since late 1969, the Harris Survey has asked cross sections of the public, the latest in early July among 1,901 households, this question:

"How would you rate the job Vice President Spiro Agnew has been doing as Vice President — excellent, pretty good, only fair or poor?"

AGNEW JOB RATING TREND

	Posi- tive %	Nega- tive %	Not Sure %
July, 1972	45	47	8
Aug., 1971	35	52	13
February	42	47	11
Oct., 1970	40	50	10
September	39	45	16
April	45	44	11
February	47	42	11
Nov., 1969	40	42	18

At no time during his tenure as Vice President has Mr. Agnew's negative rating ("only fair-poor") dropped below the 42 per cent mark, and he has yet to achieve over 50 per cent on the positive ("pretty good-excellent") side.

Nonetheless, when pitted against other possible alternatives mentioned before Nixon made his decision, Spiro Agnew emerged a clear first choice. A cross section of 1,104 Republicans and independents was asked:

"For the Republican nomination for Vice President this year, which person on this list would you most prefer, if you had to choose?"

Nixon's brother collects history

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

Backstairs at the White House: President Nixon's brother Edward has been working on an oral history project at the President's alma mater, Whittier College, for the past year. The younger Nixon tries to "encourage" people, he said, to record for posterity their reminiscences of the President in his younger political days. Both the John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson libraries have such tapes by friends and associates from their White House days.

As a member of the Board of Trustees of the Richard Nixon Foundation, Edward has visited all the presidential libraries in search of ideas.

He said in an interview that the question of where the Nixon library should be located has not been resolved. Whittier college, located in the President's hometown of Whittier, Calif., is a "natural choice," he said.

Edward also is trying to "sort out" whether there should be a library where scholars can study presidential papers, and a museum where the public may view artifacts and mementoes of the Nixon White House years. Both the President and his wife Pat already have a catalog of state gifts and other special remembrances which are destined for the library.

Both the Kennedy and Johnson libraries have such museum displays. Nixon described the (LBJ) library in Austin, Tex. as "spectacular."

Some doctors at Bethesda Naval Hospital nearby in Maryland believe that President Johnson was trying to make a medical point when he startled the world by baring his chest to show his gall bladder incision.

It had been widely interpreted that he was seeking sympathy in 1966 when Johnson summoned photographers back as they were leaving his side at the hospital where he was convalescing and showed them his scar.

Throughout his career as Vice President, Agnew has shown a propensity to roll the political waters with memorable and highly controversial rhetoric. This penchant has produced considerable support and opposition among the American people. In the latest Harris Survey, the cross section of the public was asked:

"Now let me read you some statements about Vice President Agnew. For each, tell me if you tend to agree or disagree."

Millbrook restoration meeting set

COLUMBIA, N.J. — Plans for Millbrook Days, scheduled for the weekend of Oct. 7 and 8, will be discussed at the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area headquarters, Columbia, N.J., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Other matters pertaining to Millbrook and its restoration will be discussed at the meeting, according to Peter DeGelleke, superintendent of the recreation area.

A series of fires at Millbrook destroyed a church and country store in May, but DeGelleke notes there is hope that renovation of the Lyle house will be completed by the fall.

A large response has been received from friends of the restoration project and many articles have been donated to aid in the work, DeGelleke said.

"With stronger security measures than we have ever had before," he said, "we feel we should pick up the pieces, so to speak, and make a fresh start."

He has a habit of saying and doing things that get him in trouble.	76	11	13
The country would be in real trouble if he had to take over as President.	42	38	20
By criticizing the press and TV news coverage, he tried to censor a free press.	37	38	25
By the things he has said, he has divided the country more than he has unified it.	33	46	21

Although he receives some credits for "quieting down of late," substantial majorities of the public tend to agree with his forays against youthful protesters and a majority go along with his frequent bouts against the TV network news. His willingness to venture into areas where most politicians fear to tread is found an appealing characteristic among 60 per cent of the public.

However, most damaging to the Vice President is the 42-38 per cent narrow plurality who believe that "the country would be in real trouble if he had to take over as President."

An analysis of the Agnew patterns of strengths and weaknesses shows him to be most popular in the Deep South, where by 55-36 per cent, a clear majority give him high marks in his conduct of the office. However, he is sharply criticized by young people under 30 by 58-33 per cent, independent voters by 47-44 per cent, union members by 50-41 per cent, and Catholics by a narrow 48-47 per cent. All of these latter groups are pivotal and swing segments of this year's electorate.

Nonetheless, Spiro Agnew stands well among his fellow Republicans, with the rank and file of the party giving him a positive rating of 67-28 per cent, better than two-to-one. And those who classify themselves as conservatives give him high marks by 68-24 per cent, with many viewing him as their representative within the Nixon Administration.

On balance, Vice President Agnew likely will not bring many new votes to the Nixon column, with Sen. McGovern the Democratic standard-bearer and with George Wallace apparently opting against a third-party try this time. At the same time, Nixon could ill afford to take for granted the votes of conservatives, particularly in the South, particularly in view of his radical departures from traditional GOP policy in his moves to find accommodations with Communist China and Russia.

You've heard a lot about truth-in-lending, and the new rules that require lenders to disclose the actual annual percentage interest rate on loans. We are strongly in favor of this and we're doing it. But we don't think it's quite enough. After all, you don't pay back a loan in percentages — you pay it back in real hard-to-come-by dollars. That's why, at Monroe Security, when you borrow money for any worthwhile purpose, we'll tell you not only the annual percentage rate but also the true total dollar cost of any financing. Buddy recalls 'the Old Man'

McGovern's war pilot days

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Thoughts of the presidency were far from 22-year-old George McGovern's mind on Dec. 20, 1944. One engine of his B-24 bomber was on fire and he had to land the craft and crew safely.

Ralph C. "Bill" Rounds recalls the incident vividly. He sat next to McGovern in the cockpit as his co-pilot. McGovern was "the old man," Rounds was 21.

Now a cattle broker in Wichita, Rounds kept a diary of his war years. For that date it says:

"We flew the entire crew except Sam Adams, navigator. It was to be my seventh mission. Target: Brux, Germany, oil installation."

"We got up past Lake Belaton and No. 2 and No. 3 manifold pressure dropped. We could not keep up with the formation. We peeled off at 23,400 feet and dropped to 18,000 heading south (back toward the base in Italy)."

"All at once, No. 3 engine began throwing oil and smoking badly. One minute later, she began vibrating violently. We tried to feather it, but it wouldn't. It just kept windmilling."

"The plane lost altitude rapidly, and No. 3 was hitting 2,800 rpm—a runaway prop. The engine burst into flames around the turbo charger. We slowed down to 180 indicated, and headed for a landing strip on Vis, an island off the coast of Yugoslavia. It was partisan-held territory.

"We got down okay, and luckily caught a ride to the base by way of a transient C-47."

What is not in the diary Ralph Rounds is willing to tell, and he has nothing but praise for his pilot.

"George had the whole thing under control. We cut the gas to the engine and the flame went out. George was cool, and so was I. We jettisoned extra ammo and dumped out bombs over the Adriatic."

Rounds, who McGovern called "Bill" and the rest of the crew called "Rounder," lived with his pilot from October 1944 to July 1945 in a tent at Cerignola, Italy.

"George was always a mature and rather precise sort of guy, not much for monkey business, but very compassionate for his crew and very friendly," Rounds recalled in an interview. "I was 21 at the time, and more like a grown kid. But George was a mature guy right from the start. He was a true sort of big brother to the crew."

"I looked up to George, and look up to him now. In those days he had a lot of cool savvy."

Rounds said McGovern piloted another close call flight only three days before the landing in Yugoslavia. For this mission, the South Dakota school teacher was recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross. Again from the diary:

"A beautiful day, and George and the crew flew again. I stayed on the ground. They hit Odenstahl, which we refer to as Black Hammer. The flak was way off, but they had to bomb with radar because of clouds."

"George blew a tire on takeoff, flew an eight hour mission, even with No. 2 turbo out, and did a beautiful crash landing, wheels down. There was no damage to aircraft or crew."

Rounds said the usual procedure for landing with a blown tire was with wheels up, but that McGovern risked a crash to save the plane.

Rounds did not keep his admiration for his pilot to himself. He wrote his father from training camp, and the father wrote to McGovern. Rounds has McGovern's reply:

"We're getting along swell together. A B-24 is one of the hardest airplanes in the Air Corps to fly, but Bill has surprised me in the way he can handle it. He is good at formation flying, and as you doubtless know, good formation flying is the surest way to stay alive in combat."

McGovern in those days "was like a professor you like," Rounds said. "He was working to be a teacher, and that's the kind of guy he was. He was well-read, studious and intellectual, but he could handle an airplane."

Rounds said he did not want to give an impression that McGovern was always serious. He liked a good time as well as anyone.

"He was married to that cute little Eleanor, a dandy gal. George constantly wrote his wife, and referred to his happy homelife. But, being a glamorous pilot and so forth, George wasn't one not to have a little wine and get right with it. He would not back off from a good party, but he never drank to excess. You could count on him to wake up with a clear head, which was more than you could sometimes say for me."

Rounds said when the crew "hit Rome" McGovern had an itinerary planned. "He got us up to meet the Pope with a couple of hundred GIs, and we went through the old ruins and all. He lined it up."

Rounds likes to mention another incident which he said showed McGovern's stability.

"George, myself and two other officers were in a tent at Cerignola at the end of a line of tents. We had fixed it up real good with bookcases and stuff. The Italians were great pilferers back then after losing the war and they sliced into the back of the tent while we were on a flight."

"We got back and found they had taken everything, including our clothes. All we had were our flight suits and Army-issue .45's. So I said, 'George, I don't know about you, but I'm going after these guys and get my clothes back.'"

"The other three said, 'I'm with you, Rounder.' But George said, 'Wait a minute, this is one of the trials of war. Let's report it and get some new clothes.'"

"That's what we did. George managed to keep us all cool." Rounds said he hadn't seen McGovern since they flew their B-24 back to Bradley Field, Hartford, Conn., in 1945, but he talked with him on the telephone.

Somewhat regrettably, Rounds said he won't vote for McGovern for president, even though he considers himself a friend. "I wish he was a conservative guy and I'd be campaigning for him," the candidate's wartime buddy said. "But he's just too much of a big government man."

Daredevil Knievel still going

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (UPI) — Evel Knievel, the daredevil motorcycle rider who plans to jump his "sky cycle" across the Snake River's mile wide gorge next year says he does not know why he is certain to do it, but he knows for certain that he will.

"I'll file a flight plan in Salt Lake City," he said of his Idaho jump. "I wish I had never said I'd do it but a promise is a promise."

Knievel said he will make $250,000 from the jump if he survives. His sky cycle can reach 350 miles an hour in eight seconds.

Before that he has to jump 21 cars in a Labor Day show at Seattle. And there was the Castle Rock show.

"There are three things man can't answer," he says. "Where he came from, where he's going and why he does the things he does."

Knievel says he does not think about those three too much, he just keeps on jumping.

"Dying is part of living," he says and he is a man who has come close many times.

He jumped the fountain at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas and he has undergone major surgery 14 times by his own count.

Sunday at Castle Rock, he was to jump at least 10 cars but he planned to use trucks instead. "Big trucks, the bigger the better," he said. He also planned a one-wheel stand at 90 miles an hour along a drag strip. What is his secret?

Knievel, a soft spoken braggart, repeatedly says he is the top stunt cyclist in the world and has a standing $50,000 bet against any challengers.

"I don't have any competition," he said. "There ain't any of them have the money to out jump me."

His secret?
"Gas it and hang on," he said. "If you haven't made your peace with God in 33 years, forget it."
